Introduction

1. The Working Group on the Universal Periodic Review, established in accordance with Human Rights Council resolution 5/1, held its twenty-fourth session from 18 to 29 January 2016. The review of Mozambique was held at the 3rd meeting on 19 January 2016. The delegation of Mozambique was headed by the Minister of Justice, Constitutional and Religious Affairs Abdurremane Lino de Almeida. At its 10th meeting, held on 22 January 2016, the Working Group adopted the report on Mozambique.

2. On 12 January 2016, the Human Rights Council selected the following group of rapporteurs (troika) to facilitate the review of El Salvador, Ghana and India.

3. In accordance with paragraph 15 of the annex to Human Rights Council resolution 5/1 and paragraph 5 of the annex to Council resolution 16/21, the following documents were issued for the review of Mozambique:

(a) A national report submitted/written presentation made in accordance with paragraph 15 (a) (A/HRC/WG.6/24/MOZ/1);

(b) A compilation prepared by the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR) in accordance with paragraph 15 (b) (A/HRC/WG.6/24/MOZ/2);

(c) A summary prepared by OHCHR in accordance with paragraph 15 (c) (A/HRC/WG.6/24/MOZ/3).

4. A list of questions prepared in advance by the Czech Republic, Germany, Liechtenstein, Mexico, the Netherlands, Norway, Slovenia, Spain, Sweden and the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland was transmitted to Mozambique through the troika. These questions are available on the extranet of the universal periodic review.

I. Summary of the proceedings of the review process

A. Presentation by the State under review

5. Mozambique indicated that the responsibility for preparing the report had fallen on the Interministerial Working Group for Human Rights. The process had included the broad participation of all stakeholders, including representatives of civil society organizations.

6. Mozambique recalled that it had accepted 161 recommendations from a total of 169 made during the first review cycle and that it was honoured to report that the Government had managed to implement nearly 90 per cent of them.

7. Since the last review, the country had ratified the International Convention on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of Their Families and the Optional Protocol to the Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment.

8. In addition, the country had acceded to the 1954 Convention relating to the Status of Stateless Persons and the 1961 Convention on the Reduction of Statelessness. The process of the adoption of the Code of Penal Procedure and the Code of Penitentiary Executions was under way.

9. Mozambique indicated that it would be doing its best to comply with its obligations in receiving visits of special procedure mandate holders and expressed the desire that pending visits take place as soon as possible.
10. Mozambique reported its great efforts to regularize its reporting to the specialized United Nations and African Union mechanisms. The latest reports had been presented to the Human Rights Committee and the Committee against Torture, both in October 2013, and to the African Commission on Human and Peoples' Rights, in June 2014.
11. The reports on the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women, the Convention on the Rights of the Child and the Convention on the Persons with Disabilities had already been submitted to the pertinent committees.
12. In compliance with its international commitments, particularly the Vienna Ministerial Declaration and Plan of Action of the Least Developed Countries, Mozambique had established the National Human Rights Commission and the Ombudsman in 2012, in the light of the principles relating to the status of national institutions for the promotion and protection of human rights (the Paris Principles).
13. Mozambique thanked OHCHR for the technical and financial support the latter had provided to the National Human Rights Commission and the country's business and human rights initiative, especially in the organization of a national workshop with all stakeholders.
14. On business and human rights, the Government would undertake a joint study with civil society organizations, which would culminate in the presentation of a report on the impact of business on human rights of Mozambicans.
15. The President was available to engage with all national stakeholders for the sake of peace, national unity and development, through a constructive dialogue. To date, five general elections had been held with success — presidential and legislative — in 1994, 1999, 2004, 2009 and 2014, in the efforts aimed at deepening political and civil rights, as well as the democratic process.
16. Furthermore, the decentralization process was ongoing.
17. Regarding correctional services, the Government had approved Law No. 3/2013, which established the National Penitentiary Service and its Organic Statute and Staff Regulations on fulfilling the duties of prison guard. Providing legal aid to prisoners with no means to hire their own lawyers was still a challenge, despite the work done by the Institute for Legal Assistance.
18. The number of persons in preventive detention receiving legal aid stood at around 50 per cent. The country's President had announced in December 2015 the pardon of the sentences of 1,000 inmates, who had already been released from prison, as a humanitarian and goodwill gesture. The country had made strides on gender equality. Of the 250 members of Parliament, 100 were women, which corresponded to 40 per cent of seats. Women ministers comprised 28.6 per cent of the Cabinet, while 20 per cent of vice-ministers were women.
19. In conclusion, Mozambique renewed the country's commitment to the promotion and protection of all human rights for all Mozambicans, inter alia, by strengthening State institutions and encouraging the participation of the civil society (non-governmental organizations, media etc.), in all human development activities, with the support of the international community.

B. Interactive dialogue and responses by the State under review

20. During the interactive dialogue, 94 delegations made statements. Recommendations made during the dialogue are to be found in section II of the present report.
21. Côte d'Ivoire noted the financial contribution of Mozambique to OHCHR in 2013 and the ratification of international legal instruments. It also commended the country on legislative reform on relevant human rights, in particular the 2014 Penal Code.
22. Cuba highlighted the work done regarding women's participation in politics, combating poverty and improving health-care coverage.
23. Cyprus commended the accession of Mozambique to a number of international human rights instrument. It welcomed the adoption of the new Penal Code reinforcing the legal framework for the protection of women and children's rights. Cyprus remained concerned about gender-based discrimination and violence.
24. The Czech Republic welcomed the delegation.
25. The Democratic Republic of the Congo noted the ratification of the International Convention on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of Their Families and the Optional Protocol to the Convention against Torture since the previous review, encouraging the ratification of the Optional Protocol to the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights and the First Optional Protocol to the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights. It also emphasized the need for Mozambique to issue invitations to special procedure mandate holders.
26. Denmark noted the ratification of the Optional Protocol to the Convention against Torture, the adoption of a law on information, the new Penal Code legalizing abortion and decriminalizing homosexuality, and steps to prevent early childhood marriage. It welcomed the establishment of the National Human Rights Commission and the Ombudsman, asking about how Mozambique ensured that those institutions became fully operational.
27. Djibouti commended Mozambique on the progress made in implementing the supported recommendations. It also encouraged the country to redouble its efforts for the promotion and protection of human rights.
28. Nigeria noted the legal and institutional framework for the promotion and protection of human rights, including constitutional provisions, accession to international legal instruments, the establishment of the National Human Rights Commission and the appointment of an Ombudsman, who regularly reported to Parliament.
29. Ethiopia noted encouraging outcomes in the areas of combating corruption and the fight against poverty, as well as in the education sector.
30. Finland noted the remaining social and regional inequalities in Mozambique, while recognizing government efforts to improve equality through increasing bilingual education in primary schooling.
31. France welcomed the delegation.
32. Georgia noted the ratification of the Optional Protocol to the Convention against Torture, the Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities, the Convention relating to the Status of Stateless Persons and the Convention on the Reduction of Statelessness.
33. Germany welcomed the adoption of a law on freedom of information, the new Penal Code, and the shortening of pretrial detention, as well as improved regulation of the protection of victims and witnesses in criminal proceedings. It encouraged reforms in prison conditions.

34. Ghana commended Mozambique on the establishment of the National Human Rights Commission and the Ombudsman. It expressed concern about allegations of killings, torture, arbitrary detentions, extrajudicial executions, excessive use of force and ill-treatment of detainees.
35. The Holy See acknowledged the creation of the National Human Rights Commission and efforts to prevent trafficking in persons, such as the adoption of the National Action Plan for the Advancement of Women.
36. India welcomed the conduct of regular elections and the initiatives for decentralization aimed at improving the transparency and accountability of local authorities. It noted the establishment of the National Human Rights Commission and the election of the Ombudsman by Parliament. It appreciated that 40 per cent of parliamentarians were women and the formulation of the Poverty Action Plan.
37. Indonesia appreciated the establishment of the National Human Rights Commission and the Ombudsman Office, and the ratification of the International Convention on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of Their Families and the Optional Protocol to the Convention against Torture, as well as the improvements in strengthening the legal and political frameworks. It also noted the expansion of school networks and increased access to education, while acknowledging the challenges related to literacy, especially for girls.
38. Iraq expressed appreciation for Mozambican efforts in the promotion of human rights, particularly acceding to international treaties. It supported the continuation of the work to establish the principles of human rights within the society.
39. Ireland asked about the steps taken to implement the previously supported recommendation to repeal legislation requiring the transfer of pregnant girls to night-time schools. Ireland expressed concern about the current high levels of child mortality and about criminal defamation.
40. Italy welcomed the enhancement of the legal and institutional framework of Mozambique, the ratification of key international legal instruments and positive cooperation with international and regional special procedure mechanisms.
41. Kenya commended efforts to improve living conditions through implementation of progressive social policies. It noted improvements in the enjoyment of the right to education through the expansion of the school networks, focusing on rural areas.
42. Latvia welcomed the criminalization of various forms of sexual violence and abuse, the 2014 Law on Access to Information and the establishment of the National Human Rights Commission. It expressed concern about continuing attacks, intimidation and harassment of journalists.
43. Lesotho appreciated the ratification of the majority of core international human rights treaties.
44. Libya welcomed the implementing almost 90 per cent of the universal periodic review recommendations, appreciating in particular the enactment of the Penal Code, which strengthened the commitment of Mozambique to fulfil its obligations towards women and children, specifically criminalizing all forms of violence and sexual assaults. The commended establishing the National Human Rights Commission.
45. Luxembourg commended Mozambique on the establishment of the National Human Rights Commission and the ratification of the Optional Protocol to the Convention against Torture.

46. Madagascar commended the ratification of the Optional Protocol to the Convention against Torture, measures to improve the legal and institutional framework and efforts to protect the rights of women, children and persons with disabilities.
47. Malaysia noted the establishment of the National Human Rights Commission, the efforts towards decentralization of local governments and an increase in women's representation in decision-making.
48. Mauritania commended the appointment of the Ombudsman, the ratification of the International Convention on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of Their Families and the Optional Protocol to the Convention against Torture.
49. Mauritius commended ongoing reform measures aimed at reducing poverty, eliminating discrimination against women, increasing access to sanitation and potable water and better health services. It acknowledged the adoption of the new Penal Code with improved compliance with women and children's rights.
50. Mexico welcomed the ratification of the Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities and the creation of the National Council for Children's Rights. Mexico encouraged the Government to harmonize its normative framework.
51. Montenegro commended the adoption of the new Penal Code. Montenegro asked about the measures undertaken to break the cultural silence and underreporting of violence against children in all settings.
52. Morocco congratulated Mozambique on its efforts in reforming the justice sector, extending judicial coverage and improving access to legal aid. It encouraged Mozambique to fight prison overcrowding with alternative sentences.
53. Myanmar commended the strong commitment to improve gender equality and the advancement of women by adopting measures to eliminate discrimination against women and to protect them against trafficking, sexual abuse and gender-based violence.
54. Namibia observed the steady progress in State institution-building, democracy and peacebuilding and urged Mozambique to address underlying and proximate causes of violent conflict. It commended the measures taken to ensure that the National Human Rights Commission became operational and the election of the Ombudsman in 2012.
55. The Netherlands commended progress with respect to the rights of women, children and lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender and intersex persons. It was concerned that abortions would continue to occur outside hospitals under unsafe conditions unless services were made available and accessible countrywide. It was concerned with the legal framework restricting civil society rights to assembly, association and registration.
56. New Zealand welcomed the announcement that Mozambique had been declared free of landmines. It commended the improvement of the security environment since the civil war. It welcomed the commitment to ratify the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights and strengthen the human right framework by acceding to Optional Protocol to the Convention against Torture and enacting the new Penal Code.
57. Nicaragua highlighted efforts to fight corruption. It noted the significant progress made in achieving universal access to health. It encouraged Mozambique to promote greater community participation in the implementation of social programmes.
58. The Niger noted the ratification of the majority of international human rights instruments and cooperation with international and regional special procedure mechanisms. It appreciated efforts to promote women's participation in public affairs.
59. Egypt noted the progress since the first review, particularly with respect to the rights of women and children, including by enacting the Penal Code, establishing the National Human Rights Commission and holding elections. It enquired of measures taken to enhance the capacity of law enforcement officials.

60. Norway commended the adoption of the new Penal Code and recommended that grant funding from, inter alia, the World Bank's Global Financing Facility in support of Every Woman, Every Child, be used to strengthen access to safe abortion services.

61. Pakistan appreciated the concerted efforts to implement the first universal periodic review recommendations and steps taken in the past four years. It commended the ongoing reforms and legislative process to strengthen human rights, appreciating cooperation with the human rights mechanisms, including treaty bodies.

62. Panama congratulated Mozambique on its progress in implementing recommendations accepted during the first universal periodic review cycle and its accession to the Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities and its Optional Protocol.

63. The Philippines encouraged Mozambique to address concerns about the reported high maternal mortality rate and the relatively low access to education of girls. It noted the economic challenges hampering the fulfilment of its human rights obligations, particularly gender discrimination.

64. Poland appreciated the efforts and the progress made in the implementation of the first universal periodic review recommendations. It appreciated the accession of Mozambique to the Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities and Optional Protocol to the Convention against Torture, noting that further improvement was still needed.

65. Portugal congratulated Mozambique for revising the Penal Code to criminalize drug trafficking and other crimes in order to ensure the implementation of the universal periodic review recommendations. It urged the country to approve the criminal procedure code as a priority and train legal practitioners.

66. The Russian Federation noted the positive developments in the human rights situation, particularly regarding the rights of women, children and the elderly. It welcomed the establishment of the National Human Rights Commission and the election of the Ombudsman. It appreciated the efforts to prevent and suppress the practice of human trafficking.

67. Senegal commended the strengthening of the national human rights framework through the new Penal Code and the Law on Access to Information, and the creation of the National Human Rights Commission and the appointment of the Ombudsman. It welcomed the accession of Mozambique to several human rights conventions, which reflected its willingness to realize human rights.

68. Serbia welcomed the country's efforts in promoting and protecting human rights since the first review and encouraged it to bring the National Human Rights Commission into compliance with the Paris Principles. It encouraged Mozambique to take further steps in cooperating with the human rights mechanisms and to consider issuing a standing invitation to the special procedures.

69. Sierra Leone commended the progress made since the first review, including the enactment of the Penal Code and the implementation of various policies. It encouraged further promotion of women rights and concrete measures to improve the quality of education and reform the education system.

70. In its reply, Mozambique reported that the Government had increased its human and financial resources to improve the conditions in detention centres. It had rehabilitated and built new prisons at district level, including a youth recovery centre, established youth sections in various prison facilities and introduced measures and alternative sanctions to imprisonment under the new Penal Code.

71. As regarded the accession of Mozambique to the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights, consultations at various levels with a view to its ratification were under way.

72. On the existing mechanisms for the assurance of impartiality and independence of the work of the National Human Rights Commission, the Government explained that the Commission had been created in compliance with the spirit of the Paris Principles. Indeed, its pluralistic composition and independence from any State body allowed the National Human Rights Commission to function without any interference.

73. On the measures to prevent domestic violence and sexual harassment of women and girls, domestic violence was a crime penalized under the Law on Domestic Violence and in the Penal Code. Additionally, the Government had approved, in 2012, a multi-stakeholder integrated mechanism for the assistance of victims of violence.

74. With regard to the revision of legislation and policies for elimination of child marriage and other harmful and discriminatory practices towards women and girls, the Government had approved the National Strategy for Preventing and Combating Early Marriages, which aimed to create an enabling environment for the progressive reduction and elimination of such practices.

75. Singapore welcomed the strengthening of State institutions to promote and uphold human rights by prioritizing legal, institutional, economic and social reforms to combat corruption and to ensure better delivery of public services. It noted the expansion of the schools network and the implementation of programmes to improve education in schools.

76. Slovakia noted that gender-based violence remained a serious problem despite the legislative progress in protection of women and children from violence through the enactment of the new Penal Code in 2014. It encouraged improving its implementation by raising the awareness of the public and law enforcement officials. It shared concerns expressed by the Committee against Torture and invited Mozambique to end impunity and investigate cases of alleged police extrajudicial killings, torture and ill-treatment.

77. Slovenia welcomed the adoption of the new Penal Code criminalizing gender-based violence and establishing a legal and policy framework, although it noted that such violence continued. It noted reports that child marriage, adolescent pregnancy and HIV infections remained alarming common. It regretted reports of police use of excessive force, arbitrary detention and the use of defamation laws restricting freedom of expression.

78. South Africa welcomed the 2015-2019 programme to improve public services delivery and to contribute to economic and social development efforts. It noted the introduction of universal access to antiretroviral treatment for pregnant women living with HIV, geared towards the elimination of mother-to-child transmission. It encouraged Mozambique to continue its efforts to guarantee the right to development.

79. South Sudan noted the cooperation with OHCHR and human rights mechanisms. It welcomed the peaceful presidential and legislative elections. It appreciated that Mozambique was hosting refugees and asylum seekers. It applauded the country's efforts to empower women and ensure their participation at all level of governance institutions, recognizing that discrimination against women was still a major challenge. It encouraged Mozambique to continue implementing the remaining recommendations of previous cycle.

80. Spain commended the progress made by the operationalization of the National Human Rights Commission and the election of the Ombudsman and the improvement of the independence of the judiciary and the increase of women's participation in Parliament, and welcomed the ratification of Optional Protocol to the Convention against Torture. It noted that half of Mozambique had no access to safe drinking water and sanitation.

81. Swaziland observed that Mozambique had successfully addressed most of the recommendations of the previous review, ratifying and domesticating legal instruments. It commended progress on gender issues, particularly in the growth of women's participation in decision-making positions and in education, health, economic and social development programmes.

82. Sweden welcomed the new National Strategy for Preventing and Combating Early Marriages and stated that Mozambique has the tenth highest rate thereof in the world, while marriages involving persons under 18 years of age represented 48 per cent of marriages, as current legislation allowed marriage from the age of 16 with parental consent. It noted that the new Penal Code did not outlaw discrimination on the basis of sexual orientation and gender identity.

83. Switzerland noted with concern that the right to freedom of expression was not always guaranteed and the fact that defaming the Head of State and other public figures was punishable by law. Regarding extraction of natural resources, it was concerned with the lack of sufficient involvement of rural communities in decisions that might have negative consequences on their lives.

84. Thailand commended the progress in implementing recommendations, particularly the ratification of the Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities. It commended the plan to fight HIV/AIDS, and to promote the right to health. It appreciated efforts strengthening legislation to protect women and children.

85. Timor-Leste commended Mozambique for the ratification of the International Convention on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of Their Families, the adoption of the new Penal Code in 2014 and the establishment of the National Human Rights Commission.

86. Togo congratulated Mozambique for its demining programme and encouraged it to continue the implementation of the programme of assistance to victims.

87. Turkey noted with satisfaction the accession of Mozambique to the International Convention on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of Their Families. It also welcomed the pacific and transparent elections held in 2014. It encouraged Mozambique to accelerate its efforts in fighting corruption.

88. Uganda considered that establishment of the National Council for Children's Rights and the National Human Rights Commission demonstrated that Mozambique was making solid efforts to promote and protect human rights.

89. Ukraine acknowledged the progress made by Mozambique. It noted the strengthening of the national legal and institutional framework in the education sector and reforms in the health sector.

90. The United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland commended the revision of the Penal Code. It was concerned that the rights of citizens who did not support the Government could be undermined.

91. The United Republic of Tanzania noted the achievements of Mozambique in the eradication of poverty and the provision of affordable housing and clean and safe water. It called on the international community to heed the request of Mozambique for technical assistance.

92. The United States of America applauded the enactment of the new Penal Code. It was concerned over the lack of progress on several issues from the previous review, including continued allegations of arbitrary arrest and detention.
93. Uruguay highlighted Mozambican efforts to fulfil its obligations in submitting reports to the treaty monitoring bodies. It welcomed its efforts on gender equality, but expressed concern about reported discrimination and violence.
94. The Bolivarian Republic of Venezuela was pleased by the creation of the National Human Rights Commission and the Ombudsman. It noted an improvement of health indicators, among others vaccination coverage for infants under 2 years old.
95. Zambia commended Mozambique for the implementation of some of the recommendations from the first review, but noted that, despite the positive steps taken, challenges remained.
96. Zimbabwe noted the progress of Mozambique in expanding school enrolment and measures increase the enrolment of girls. It also noted progress in increasing the representation of women in public life and the ratification of further instruments.
97. Afghanistan welcomed the commitment of Mozambique to the promotion and protection of human rights and its efforts to regularize its reporting to the United Nations human rights mechanisms.
98. Algeria congratulated Mozambique for its level of cooperation with regional and United Nations human rights mechanisms. It noted the ratification of the International Convention on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of Their Families and the Optional Protocol to the Convention against Torture.
99. Angola underlined the determination of Mozambique to protect human rights, as enshrined in its Constitution. It welcomed the ratification of the International Convention on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of Their Families and the Optional Protocol to the Convention against Torture.
100. Argentina welcomed the ratification of the Optional Protocol to the Convention against Torture and noted the concerns of the Special Rapporteur on extreme poverty and human rights concerning discrimination and abuse of girls in schools.
101. Australia expressed concern about continuing reports of arbitrary detention, torture and ill-treatment. It recognized that same-sex sexual activity had been decriminalized, but noted the lack of specific protection against discrimination.
102. Austria noted Mozambican efforts to improve the administration of justice. However, it noted that the justice system continued to face procedural delays, overcrowding of prisons and deterioration of prison conditions.
103. Bangladesh noted the establishment of the National Human Rights Commission, the ratification of international instruments and the formulation of the second National Action Plan for Children. Economic challenges meant that Mozambique warranted further technical assistance.
104. Belgium celebrated the adoption of the new Penal Code and the Law on Access to Information. It encouraged additional efforts in fighting impunity and ensuring judicial independence and access to justice.
105. Benin appreciated the ratification of the Optional Protocol to the Convention against Torture, the adoption of the new Penal Code and the draft legislation on access to information.

106. The Plurinational State of Bolivia wished to offer recommendations to Mozambique in a constructive spirit.

107. Botswana welcomed the creation of the National Human Rights Commission and the establishment of the Office of the Ombudsman. However, it noted reports of child debt bondage, child abuse and child labour.

108. Brazil noted the initiatives of Mozambique to foster political participation and especially praised the increased participation of women at all levels of decision-making.

109. Burundi welcomed the ratification of instruments such as the Optional Protocol to the Convention against Torture and the creation of the Ombudsman, as well as the introduction of civic, moral and human rights education in schools. It noted the different measures aimed at improving access to health services and HIV treatment. It celebrated the creation of the National Council for Children's Rights.

110. Canada suggested the enactment of a new criminal procedure code to implement alternatives to imprisonment. It commended Mozambique for taking action to decriminalize same-sex conduct.

111. Chad noted that Mozambique was party to most human right international instruments. It encouraged Mozambique to keep on cooperating with the Human Rights Council, the United Nations and the African Union.

112. Chile acknowledged significant advances made by Mozambique, among them, constituting a multisectoral mechanism to assist victims of gender violence, ratifying the Optional Protocol to the Convention against Torture and setting up social housing policies.

113. China commended Mozambique for receiving a large number of refugees from other African countries. The country was committed to fighting corruption, promoting social justice and protecting women's rights. It was taking emergency measures to deal with the impact of natural disasters.

114. The Congo noted the development of the institutional framework for the protection of human rights. It encouraged Mozambique to continue modernizing places of detentions and ensuring protection for refugees and stateless persons.

115. Costa Rica acknowledged advances in the political representation of women and the establishment of the "green line" to complain of inappropriate police conduct. It expressed concern for child labour, arbitrary detention and limits on freedom of expression.

116. Tunisia noted the ratification of the Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities and the Optional Protocol to the Convention against Torture and the adoption of a national plan to implement universal periodic review recommendations.

117. Mozambique stated that, regarding the mistreatment of prisoners, the Government focused on the training and development of human resources in related areas, by providing regular and executive courses and training activities, including on matters relating to human rights. Organizational and structural reform was in progress and had already resulted in the adoption of legal instruments such as the new Police Law (2013), the Disciplinary Rules of the Police (2014) and the modernization and strengthening of the National Penitentiary Service.

118. On measures to bring to justice perpetrators of crimes against journalists and opinion makers, Mozambique stated that, in the event of a crime, including the ones mentioned by delegations, the Government undertook proceedings to bring perpetrators to court. Relating to the killing of Professor Gilles Cistac and journalist Paulo Machava, the Government was working hard to bring the perpetrators to justice. To tackle the phenomenon of the kidnapping and killing of people with albinism, the Government had approved a specific action plan to protect and assist the victims. The plan provided for, among other measures, the development of public awareness-raising campaigns to demystify beliefs and erroneous perceptions about people with albinism. There were also joint actions in place between Mozambique and the countries of the region aiming at preventing the trafficking of people with albinism.

119. As for the transfer of pregnant girls to evening classes, the matter was being assessed due to the sensitivity of the issue. A multisectoral group had been created to consult with different segments of society.

120. On the protection of girls from sexual abuse, specific measures had been put in place namely: penalization under the Penal Code of those who engaged in sexual acts with minors; campaigns against sexual harassment and abuse of girls in school and community; and imposition of sanctions against teachers or education employees who had sexual involvement with students.

121. Relating to measures to combat early school dropout, the following measures had been taken: expansion of the school network, with more schools situated near communities to reduce the distance between home and school; provision of schoolbooks and education materials for primary education; and provision of a fund to support disadvantaged and vulnerable students.

122. On measures to ensure that pregnant girls and young mothers had the opportunity to complete their education, they were encouraged to continue their studies through the provision of opportunities for further study during pregnancy and after delivery.

123. With regard to elections, there was a revision of the Electoral Law, allowing greater partisan representation, better oversight of elections and greater transparency. Civic education campaigns were also undertaken.

124. To date, five general elections — presidential and legislative — had been held with success in 1994, 1999, 2004, 2009 and 2014, as part of the efforts aiming at deepening the political and civil rights, as well as the democratic process. Furthermore, the decentralization process was ongoing.

125. Regarding violence and abuse against the older persons, the protection of that category of citizens was ensured by a mechanism providing assistance to family and child victims of violence. Mozambique also had an institutional mechanism for considering issues relating to older persons, the National Council for Social Action. Law 3/2014 on the Promotion and Protection of the Rights of the Elderly provided for fines for the ill-treatment of older persons. The main challenges faced in this area were: the dissemination of legal instruments protecting the rights of older persons; the translation into national languages of the legal instruments that promote and protect their rights; and awareness-raising among practitioners of traditional medicine and community leaders in protecting older persons.

126. Regarding the ratification of the Rome Statute in its 2010 version, in the light of the unfolding political and legal developments, the country had opted for further studying that instrument. Nevertheless, Mozambique assumed the principle of complementarity between the Rome Statute and the domestic laws.

127. Regarding the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights, the process for acceding to that Covenant was now at an advanced stage. In the foreseeable future, a proposal for acceding to the Covenant would be submitted to the Cabinet for scrutiny. Subsequently, that proposal would be submitted to the Parliament, which was the competent body under the auspices of the Constitution for approving the proposal and binding Mozambique to that instrument. It was hoped that this would take place within the parliamentary session of 2016.

II. Conclusions and/or recommendations
