Introduction

1. The Working Group on the Universal Periodic Review, established in accordance with Human Rights Council resolution 5/1, held its twenty-eighth session from 6 to 17 November 2017. The review of Czechia was held at the 1st meeting, on 6 November 2017. The delegation of Czechia was headed by the Deputy Minister for Human Rights, Martina Štěpánková. At its 10th meeting, held on 10 November 2017, the Working Group adopted the report on Czechia.

2. On 13 February 2017, the Human Rights Council selected the following group of rapporteurs (troika) to facilitate the review of Czechia: Brazil, Indonesia and Nigeria.

3. In accordance with paragraph 15 of the annex to Human Rights Council resolution 5/1 and paragraph 5 of the annex to Council resolution 16/21, the following documents were issued for the review of Czechia:

(a) A national report submitted/written presentation made in accordance with paragraph 15 (a) (A/HRC/WG.6/28/CZE/1);

(b) A compilation prepared by the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR) in accordance with paragraph 15 (b) (A/HRC/WG.6/28/CZE/2);

(c) A summary prepared by OHCHR in accordance with paragraph 15 (c) (A/HRC/WG.6/28/CZE/3).

4. A list of questions prepared in advance by Belgium, Brazil, Germany, Norway, Portugal, Slovenia, Spain, the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland and Uruguay was transmitted to Czechia through the troika. These questions are available on the extranet of the universal periodic review.

I. Summary of the proceedings of the review process

A. Presentation by the State under review

5. The Deputy Minister for Human Rights highlighted the contribution of Czechia to the success of the universal periodic review through its efforts to implement the recommendations received during the previous cycle. The national report had been prepared through a transparent approach and coordinated by the Section for Human Rights at the Office of the Government. Government human rights advisory bodies served as a platform for the authorities to meet with representatives of civil society and academia, leading to recommendations on improvements on human rights issues being made to the Government. Many measures had been taken to implement the 129 recommendations accepted during the previous cycle.

6. Czechia had ratified almost all the international human rights treaties it had committed to ratifying after the second review. It was seeking ways to ratify the Optional Protocol to the Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities, the Optional Protocol to the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights and the International Labour Organization (ILO) Domestic Workers Convention, 2011 (No. 189), and was preparing the legislative changes to ratify the Council of Europe Convention on Preventing and Combating Violence against Women and Domestic Violence (the Istanbul Convention). It did not plan to ratify the International Convention on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of Their Families.

7. Czechia would considerably strengthen its implementation of the Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities by entrusting the Ombudsperson with its independent monitoring as of January 2018. The Ombudsperson was an independent institution that monitored the human rights situation in the country and advised State authorities, the Government and the parliament. A special strategy on the implementation of the Convention was in place, which also focused on the employment of persons with disabilities.

8. Czechia had adopted the amendment to the Schools Act, providing for inclusive education of all pupils with special needs, including Roma children with social disadvantages, and aiming at integrating all children within the mainstream education system.

9. In 2014, Czechia had adopted a comprehensive Roma integration strategy setting benchmarks and goals in the areas of employment, housing, education, language and culture. The Government was committed to solving the issue of Lety u Písku by replacing the pig farm on the site of the former Roma concentration camp with a memorial to the Roma holocaust. Another memorial was being created in Hodonín u Kunštátu.

10. Health-care laws had been amended to prevent the illegal sterilization of Roma women, and victims could claim damages through court action. In justified cases, the court could waive the court fees or grant free legal assistance. A working group had been established by the Government Council for Roma Minority Affairs to explore options to offer psychological support to victims of illegal sterilizations.

11. A comprehensive strategy on equality between women and men had been adopted in 2014, addressing issues such as the gender pay gap, work-life balance, balanced representation in decision-making positions, domestic violence and gender stereotypes.

12. Concrete action plans had been adopted to implement the Convention on the Rights of the Child, the main objective being to transfer the care of children in need from institutions to families. A strong legal framework was in place that protected children against all kinds of violence, including sexual violence.

13. A strategy had been adopted to improve the situation in prisons and to ensure the social integration of detainees after their release and avoid recidivism.

14. With the migration crisis of 2015, detention facilities for foreigners were overcrowded but the situation had improved with the opening of new facilities, including one for families with children.

15. Czechia continued to combat trafficking in human beings, including labour exploitation, through prevention and prosecution and by protecting and assisting victims.

16. A strong legal framework against racism and xenophobia was in place, allowing for prosecution for hate and racist crimes by law enforcement authorities and courts, and for protection of victims. The fight against racism, hate crime and extremism was subject to annual government strategies and evaluations. Negative attitudes and stereotypes, however, needed to be tackled, and a specific campaign against racism, xenophobia and intolerance had therefore been launched in 2015.

17. In 2015, a strategy on social housing had been adopted. A bill on social housing had not been approved before the end of the parliamentary term in 2017. Further efforts were needed in that area.

18. In October 2017, the country had adopted its first national action plan on the activities of State institutions and businesses and the protection of human rights, in line with the Guiding Principles on Business and Human Rights.

19. To implement the Sustainable Development Goals, Czechia had adopted the comprehensive “Czech Republic 2030” strategy.

20. Human rights protection was a cornerstone of the Government’s foreign policy. Since its establishment in 2004, the Transition Promotion Programme had funded projects up to €24 million, and the Government had allocated €225 million to official development assistance in 2016. Czechia cooperated with international human rights mechanisms, including as an active member of the Human Rights Council. It had engaged with the Council mechanisms, including through the submission of a universal periodic review midterm implementation report, had issued a standing invitation to the special procedures and cooperated with the treaty bodies. Czechia had also contributed financially to the work of OHCHR.

B. Interactive dialogue and responses by the State under review

21. During the interactive dialogue, 81 delegations made statements. Recommendations made during the dialogue are to be found in section II of the present report.
22. Slovenia commended the adoption of the National Plan of Action for Inclusive Education, but expressed concern at the increase in the proportion of Roma children with mild mental disabilities from 28.4 per cent in the 2013/14 school year to 30.9 per cent in 2016/17.
23. Spain appreciated the commitment of Czechia to gender equality. It was concerned that hate crimes were especially targeting the Roma community and that the sustainability of the penitentiary system was threatened by the deterioration of material conditions.
24. The State of Palestine, while noting efforts made to combat racial discrimination, remained concerned about acts of racially motivated violence and stereotypes. It welcomed the development of a national action plan in accordance with the Guiding Principles on Business and Human Rights.
25. Switzerland welcomed the efforts made by Czechia in the area of inclusive education, but remained concerned about the effective implementation of the reforms, especially the programme aimed at combating discrimination in schools.
26. Thailand noted continuing efforts to combat hate crimes, but was concerned about the prevalence of such crimes resulting from racial and xenophobic motives. Thailand was also concerned about violence against women and children.
27. Timor-Leste welcomed the Anti-Discrimination Act and the adoption of the Roma Integration Strategy 2015–2020 to ensure equal access to education to Roma girls and boys. Timor-Leste also appreciated the preparation of a legal aid system to assist victims of discrimination.
28. Tunisia commended the ratification of numerous international instruments and took note of the national strategies that had been implemented to protect the rights of children and to combat trafficking in human beings.
29. Tukey welcomed the members of the delegation and thanked them for their presentation.
30. Ukraine commended the high level of implementation of recommendations received during the second review cycle. It noted the adoption of strategies and action plans to safeguard human rights and the fact that a significant number of international human rights instruments had been domesticated.
31. The United Kingdom welcomed the National Strategy for Combating Trafficking in Human Beings for 2016–2019 and the ratification of the 2014 Protocol to the ILO Forced Labour Convention, 1930 (No. 29) and encouraged their full implementation.
32. The United States of America commended Czechia for its intention to properly commemorate the victims of the Lety concentration camp. It expressed concern about the systematic discrimination faced by Roma in education, employment, housing and health care and about anti-Muslim and anti-migrant rhetoric.
33. Uruguay welcomed the ratification of the International Convention for the Protection of All Persons from Enforced Disappearance, and the efforts made to promote gender equality. It noted progress made on economic, social and cultural rights, including in the area of inclusive education.
34. Afghanistan noted achievements by Czechia, including amendments made to the Constitution and the adoption of the Anti-Discrimination Act. Afghanistan commended efforts aimed at combating extremist ideology such as neo-Nazism and other forms of intolerance.
35. Albania appreciated the continuing engagement of Czechia with different human rights organizations. Noting the importance of the Ombudsperson, Albania encouraged Czechia to strengthen the institutional capacity of that institution.

36. Algeria welcomed the ratification of international human rights instruments and the adoption of several plans and policies relating to Roma, children and women. It commended measures taken to combat discrimination and encouraged Czechia to consider broadening the Mediator's mandate to cover this issue.
37. Andorra welcomed the Action Plan for the Prevention of Domestic and Gender-Based Violence for 2015–2018, and the new educational system for pupils with special needs. It encouraged continued efforts to strengthen inclusive education for children with disabilities.
38. Angola welcomed progress in promoting and protecting human rights since the second review, including in the areas of Roma and child rights, gender equality and the fight against human trafficking and criminality. However, challenges remained.
39. Argentina welcomed the ratification of the International Convention for the Protection of All Persons from Enforced Disappearance. It noted the measures taken to combat discrimination.
40. Armenia commended the steps taken to combat racism and hatred, the measures taken to promote gender equality and ensure inclusive education for all, and the National Strategy for Combating Trafficking in Human Beings for 2016–2019.
41. Australia commended Czechia for its long-standing commitment to protecting and promoting human rights. It welcomed the implementation of the Roma Integration Strategy 2015–2020. It remained concerned by reports of poor prison conditions in the country.
42. Austria noted that the situation of Roma continued to be problematic. It enquired about efforts made to counter stereotypes and prejudices against Roma and to address the discriminatory effects of the restitution legislation and practices. It noted worrying tendencies of hate speech and hate crimes.
43. Azerbaijan welcomed efforts regarding the implementation of several recommendations Czechia had accepted during the second review, including measures taken to enhance anti-discrimination action in the country, particularly the Roma Integration Strategy.
44. Bahrain welcomed efforts made to implement the recommendations from the previous review. It stressed the importance of showing seriousness in fighting instigation to hatred, racism and xenophobia, and noted an increase in acts of discrimination against minorities, including Roma.
45. Bangladesh noted a number of legislative and political interventions and stressed that more focus was required to implement measures to deal with negative stereotypes and prejudices that minorities and migrants were still experiencing, including Islamophobia.
46. Belarus noted that despite the anti-discrimination measures and efforts taken to combat social isolation, there were still numerous examples of discrimination on different grounds and of racism against migrants and minorities.
47. Belgium acknowledged some positive steps taken regarding the implementation of the recommendations made during the previous review. However, it noted that there was still room for progress on certain issues, such as the fight against all forms of discrimination.
48. Bosnia and Herzegovina commended the steps taken to strengthen human rights protection and welcomed the strong commitment to combat human trafficking. It shared the concerns of the treaty bodies about the low representation of women in decision-making processes.
49. Botswana noted the National Strategy to Protect Children's Rights and the National Strategy for Combating Trafficking in Human Beings. It commended the promotion of equal representation of women and men in decision-making positions and in the labour market. However, access to justice and remedies remained a challenge.
50. Brazil commended the adoption of the Roma Integration Strategy, while expressing concern about reports that Roma continued to suffer from discrimination. Brazil acknowledged measures taken to improve the migration and refugee crisis, but was concerned about detention policies.

51. Bulgaria praised the adoption of several strategies in the areas of gender equality, including for balanced representation in decision-making positions, child rights and migration. It requested information on the first strategy to prevent and provide a solution to homelessness and its implementation.

52. Canada welcomed anti-discrimination efforts, including the steps taken to prevent the segregation of Roma children and promote their participation in mainstream schools. It noted that the implementation and enforcement of laws prohibiting discrimination and crimes motivated by discrimination was essential.

53. Chile welcomed the ratification of several instruments and the new action plans on gender equality and the rights of children, minorities and persons with disabilities. It remained concerned at the impact of prejudice and stereotyping on the fundamental rights of the Roma population and on refugees and asylum seekers.

54. China noted positive actions in terms of legal reforms, plans and strategies. China remained concerned at the prevalence of gender inequality, the systematic discrimination affecting minorities and continued racial hatred and violence against the Roma, and at the fact that the rights of refugees and migrants were not effectively protected.

55. Côte d'Ivoire welcomed the recent ratification of several human rights treaties and the adoption of the Anti-Discrimination Act and the Strategy for Equality between Women and Men 2014–2020.

56. Croatia welcomed the midterm review undertaken by Czechia and the measures taken to criminalize various forms of child abuse. It encouraged Czechia to further strengthen its legal framework in the area of the rights of the child. Croatia supported the efforts made in the area of anti-discrimination.

57. Cuba referred positively to the implementation of the Anti-Discrimination Act and the Roma Integration Strategy 2015–2020. Cuba echoed the concerns raised regarding ongoing expressions of racism and xenophobia, which had been on the rise in recent years. The treatment afforded to migrants had also received criticism from the High Commissioner for Human Rights.

58. Denmark, while welcoming initiatives to ensure an inclusive education system, was concerned that Roma children continued to be overrepresented in special schools for children diagnosed with a mild mental disability.

59. Ecuador welcomed the delegation and thanked Czechia for the presentation of its report.

60. Egypt welcomed the participation of Czechia in the universal periodic review.

61. Estonia, while welcoming efforts made to achieve gender equality, encouraged further efforts with regard to women's representation and to combating violence against women.

62. In its response, Czechia indicated that major steps towards inclusive education were being made, even though it remained a major challenge. The amendment to the Schools Act, which had entered into force in September 2016, provided for inclusive education for all pupils with special needs, including Roma children with social disadvantages and children with disabilities. It secured the right of children with special needs, as diagnosed after psychological and educational evaluation, to obtain the necessary assistance to participate in mainstream education through a system of support measures. One year of free, mandatory preschool education for all children had been introduced in September 2017.

63. Based on a review of Roma children, 221 pupils had been removed from the programme for children with a mild mental disorder. Czechia would continue the review process of Roma pupils to assess the individual needs of each child and place them in appropriate education. The reform had resulted in a continuous decrease in the number of special schools and classes for pupils with mild mental disabilities, and the increase by about 2 per cent a year of the number of such children in mainstream classes. The increase in the number of children enrolled in the programme for children with mild mental disorders was the result of demographic growth, rather than the placement of children in such programme. Such placements had been discontinued in 2017, and no more children could be placed in that programme.

64. Sterilization was regulated by the Specific Medical Services Act of 2011 and required the written and informed consent of the patient. A minimum gap of 7 days (for sterilization for medical reasons) and 14 days (for sterilization for non-medical reasons) was required between the provision of information and consent for sterilization. Sterilization of people with diminished mental capacity was possible only when required by the person's health. Written consent from the guardian, a professional committee and the court was required. Before adopting an opinion, the professional committee must discuss each individual case and verify that all the conditions were fulfilled. In addition, the opinion of the individual concerned had to be taken into account.

65. Racism, xenophobia and Islamophobia were addressed under a comprehensive legal framework that provide for special assistance to victims of hate crimes and for specialized public prosecutors and police officers. However, they continued to be a major issue in Czechia, and had been exacerbated during the migration crisis. To combat stereotypes and prejudices, the Government had launched the Campaign against Racism and Hate Violence 2014–2017, which consisted of several activities, including the "Hate-Free Culture" campaign disseminated through traditional and social media and targeting youth between 18 and 25 years of age, and educational and training activities for schoolchildren and the police. Liaison officers specifically trained in multicultural issues or in investigating hate crimes had been appointed within the police to protect minorities from discrimination and to identify discriminatory based motivations.

66. The Government had adopted the 2014–2020 Strategy for Equality between Women and Men, complemented by two action plans on the prevention of domestic and gender-based violence and on equal representation of women and men in decision-making positions. Regarding the pay gap, existing legislation provided for equal pay and the Government had launched the 22 per cent to equality campaign. Further steps included care services for small children, parental benefit for fathers taking care of their children and paternity leave, as well as the promotion of flexible working arrangements.

67. The Anti-Discrimination Act protected against discrimination based on many grounds in many spheres of society, and provided judicial and administrative remedies for victims, who could be assisted in court by specialized non-governmental organizations and receive free legal representation and counselling. The Ombudsperson was also competent in the field of discrimination. A new system of class action would be proposed in the near future.

68. The question of the accreditation of the Office of the Ombudsperson, which was in accordance with the principles relating to the status of national institutions for the promotion and protection of human rights (the Paris Principles), was being discussed, as well as the possible establishment of an ombudsperson for children.

69. Finland noted the progress made in terms of Roma children's access to and integration in education. It also noted that there was room for further work on the implementation of the amendment to the Schools Act.

70. France welcomed recent progress made, for example in the education of Roma. It noted, nevertheless, that obstacles continued to exist in the situation of Roma, prisoners and foreign workers.

71. Georgia welcomed the recent ratification of international instruments on children's rights and the adoption of the Strategy for Equality between Women and Men and the Action Plan for the Prevention of Domestic and Gender-Based Violence.

72. Germany welcomed the adoption of the National Strategy to Protect Children's Rights, including the commitments to develop foster care systems.

73. Ghana welcomed the initiatives taken to ratify human rights treaties. It urged Czechia to ensure that the legal aid system made provision to bring to justice promoters of discrimination and hate violence, especially against the Roma, and to end the detention of all children, whether accompanied, unaccompanied or separated.
74. Greece commended Czechia for the steps it had taken to meet its international obligations. It appreciated the adoption of the Anti-Discrimination Act and the steps taken towards eliminating discriminatory practices in housing and employment.
75. Guatemala noted with concern reports of continuous racial hatred and violence perpetrated against Roma, the spread of stereotypes and prejudices against refugees and asylum seekers through websites and social media, and the increase in the number of cases of Islamophobia.
76. Honduras highlighted the Government's efforts to put an end to the segregation of the Roma community and to ratify various protocols for the protection of human rights.
77. Hungary asked how the new class action system could contribute to combating discrimination and expressed concern about reports that Roma children were still placed in special schools. While praising policies and financial support for national minorities, it encouraged Czechia to foster tolerance and understanding towards regional or minority languages and cultures.
78. Iceland commended Czechia for its success in implementing the commitments made following the universal periodic review held in October 2012.
79. India welcomed the ratification of several instruments and the introduction of measures contributing to poverty reduction. It commended initiatives to combat the sexual exploitation of children and discrimination, including against women and Roma. It remained concerned, however, about the implementation of the relevant legislation and difficulties faced by the Roma community.
80. Indonesia expressed its appreciation for the adoption of the Roma Integration Strategy 2015–2020 and the adoption of the National Strategy for Combating Trafficking in Human Beings for 2016–2019.
81. The Islamic Republic of Iran was concerned about the persistence of racial hatred and racially motivated violence, particularly against the Roma and Muslim communities, the sexual abuse of women and children, human trafficking, and insufficient access to subsidized municipal housing.
82. Iraq welcomed measures taken to combat racial discrimination, and the adoption of government strategies, including on Roma inclusion, child's rights and against human trafficking.
83. Ireland welcomed the progress made on children's rights but regretted that Czechia had not yet implemented the recommendations regarding the creation of an ombudsman for children. It welcomed the reforms to improve access for Roma children to mainstream education, but noted that some worrying practices persisted.
84. Israel noted the serious work done to protect the rights of members of the Roma community, inter alia through the Roma Integration Strategy 2015–2020. Israel also noted the important campaign against racism and hate crimes 2014–2017.
85. Italy welcomed the signature of the Council of Europe Convention on Preventing and Combating Violence against Women and Domestic Violence, the ratification of the Council of Europe Convention on the Protection of Children against Sexual Exploitation and Sexual Abuse, and the adoption of measures to protect the rights of vulnerable groups.
86. Libya commended the progress made in the field of human rights, including the adoption of legislation and the ratification of the Convention on the Rights of the Child.
87. Malaysia welcomed the efforts made by Czechia, including to ensure that domestic legal frameworks were in place to fulfil its international human rights obligations. It welcomed positive developments in the areas of social inclusion and protection of the rights of vulnerable groups.

88. Maldives was encouraged by the positive steps taken to advance children's rights, including the amended Schools Act, and gender equality, including the Strategy for Equality between Women and Men 2014–2020.

89. Mexico commended the ratification of several instruments relating to the rights of the child and welcomed efforts to prevent human trafficking and support victims. It expressed concern about the resurgence of xenophobic and racist hate speech worldwide, including in Czechia.

90. Mongolia, while welcoming measures taken to tackle discrimination against Roma minorities, considered it important to provide training to teachers with a specific focus on ethnicity. It remained concerned at significant gender equality disparities, despite the efforts made.

91. Montenegro welcomed the steps taken to improve the institutional and legislative human rights framework, including for the rights of children, and commended activities to combat discrimination and protect victims. It noted that Roma continued to be the main victims of racially motivated violence.

92. Morocco praised the efforts made in the promotion and protection of human rights and the presentation in 2015 of a midterm review report. Morocco appreciated the importance given to strengthening the institutional framework and commended the establishment of the Ombudsperson's Office.

93. Namibia commended the progress made since the previous review, including the ratification of several international human rights instruments.

94. Nepal welcomed the ratification of international instruments and the adoption of several strategic measures. It highlighted the efforts made to combat discrimination and shun violence. It noted that Czechia could increase its contribution to meet the global target for development assistance.

95. The Netherlands commended the measures taken to combat discrimination, including on the basis of sexual orientation and gender identity. It appreciated efforts to ensure gender equality and increase the inclusion of Roma, but noted that Roma continued to be a disadvantaged group.

96. Nicaragua welcomed the significant progress made since the last review, including the formulation and implementation of the Strategy for Equality between Women and Men 2014–2020 and the National Strategy for Combating Trafficking in Human Beings 2016–2019.

97. Norway commended the amendments to the Education Act on special educational needs and on preschool education, the work of the Public Defender of Rights and the efforts made to ensure gender equality.

98. Peru commended the progress achieved in ensuring gender equality and the numerous measures taken to achieve the full integration of the Roma population. It welcomed the adoption of the Roma Integration Strategy 2015–2020.

99. The Philippines noted the efforts to revise domestic legislation to make it consistent with the international human rights obligations of Czechia, and the strong commitment to combat human trafficking. It encouraged Czechia to continue strengthening institutional structures.

100. Portugal commended the continued efforts concerning inclusive education and efforts to combat racism, violence and hatred, particularly through campaigns to combat xenophobia and Islamophobia.

101. The Republic of Korea recognized efforts to implement the recommendations from the previous cycle, including through legislation and national action plans and strategies to better address social and economic issues. It noted the Education Act and appreciated the recent improvement in terms of gender equality.

102. The Republic of Moldova commended the strong focus on human rights policies, particularly the measures aimed at strengthening the child protection system, and the Government's strong commitment to end the institutionalization of children. It also appreciated efforts to train officers working with vulnerable children.

103. Romania appreciated the measures adopted following the second review cycle and asked if, after almost three years since the adoption of the Strategy for Equality between Women and Men 2014–2020, there had been a midterm assessment of its implementation.

104. The Russian Federation was seriously concerned about violations of the rights of national and ethnic minorities in Czechia, poor conditions in temporary camps for refugees and the conditions of detention in prisons and in pretrial detention facilities.

105. Senegal noted the great political will Czechia had shown in its efforts to implement the recommendations accepted during the second review cycle, particularly its ratification of several international human rights instruments and the measures aimed at combating all forms of discrimination.

106. Serbia was pleased with the activities relating to Roma integration and commended the steps aimed at monitoring and assessing the Roma Integration Strategy. It encouraged Czechia to continue to look for ways to ensure the most effective protection for victims of discrimination. Serbia welcomed the measures taken to increase gender equality.

107. Sierra Leone encouraged Czechia to intensify its efforts to implement the Roma Integration Strategy, to standardize identification and protection measures for victims of trafficking, to ratify the Istanbul Convention and to quell hate speech and Islamophobia.

108. Slovakia welcomed the adoption of the Roma Integration Strategy and the Inclusive Education Action Plan, and the amendments to the Schools Act and the migration policy strategy. It also welcomed the amendments to the Criminal Code, providing for punishment of racially motivated crimes and the prohibition of discrimination against persons with disabilities.

109. The Bolivarian Republic of Venezuela welcomed the delegation of Czechia.

110. The delegation of Czechia stated that the Roma Integration Strategy, which had been adopted in 2014, covered education, employment, housing, health and social services, the life of the Roma as a national minority and their public participation. The Department for Social Inclusion established local strategic social inclusion plans through local partnerships with municipalities.

111. Czechia had adopted the National Strategy to Protect Children's Rights 2013–2018 and had made legislative amendments, for example to the Social and Legal Protection Act, introducing provisions indicating that institutional care was a measure of last resort that could be applied by court decision only. Institutionalization of children under the age of 3 was still possible, but alternatives were considered. The commercial sexual exploitation and prostitution of children were criminalized as human trafficking, and non-commercial sexual abuse of children constituted a specific criminal offence with an aggravating circumstance, entailing a more severe punishment. Child victims fell into the category of particularly vulnerable victims and enjoyed reinforced legal protection.

112. There was a system of alternatives to detention for asylum seekers under both the Asylum and Aliens Acts, detention being a measure of last resort. Detention of families had been rare since 2016, and the detention of asylum-seeking families was prohibited under the Asylum Act. Foreigners and asylum seekers were not detained in regular prisons. The funding of detention centres had increased.

113. Overcrowding in prisons was still an issue, and alternatives to detention, such as electronic monitoring system and increased use of monetary punishments, were sought. Improvements to prison conditions were under way, including regarding pretrial detention.

114. In conclusion, the Deputy Minister thanked Czech civil society and the Ombudsman, who had contributed to the implementation of the recommendations received during the previous cycle, and the delegations for their questions, comments and recommendations, which would provide additional impetus to efforts to overcome the challenges that remained. Czechia was proud of its achievements in the field of human rights, while recognizing the challenges the country continued to face, including with regard to Roma inclusion, public expressions of xenophobia and intolerance, the migrant crisis and the issue of social housing. It would submit an interim implementation report in 2020 and brief the Council in March 2019 on early implementation of several of the accepted recommendations.

II. Conclusions and/or recommendations

115. The following recommendations will be examined by Czechia, which will provide responses in due time, but no later than the thirty-seventh session of the Human Rights Council:
