BACKGROUND

Humanitarian Context

As the crisis in Ukraine is well into its fifth year, civilians continue to bear the brunt of the conflict. Fear of shelling, violent clashes, or treading on one of the many landmines or unexploded remnants of war (eastern Ukraine has been branded one of the world's most mine-contaminated areas) are the daily reality for millions of people living on both sides of the over 420-km-long "contact-line", which is about the length of the French-German border. Since the start of the conflict, more than 3,000 civilian men, women and children have been killed and another 9,000 injured.

The crisis in eastern Ukraine has become protracted. The long-term consequences are serious with daily hostilities damaging critical infrastructure often disrupting essential services, such as water supply and sanitation facilities, severely impacting the lives of the people residing in the area. Every month, more than 1.1 million civilian crossings are recorded at the five checkpoints, where people often have to endure long waiting hours in the bitter cold in winter and scorching heat in summer to maintain family links and access basic services. This is especially arduous for the elderly, who make up 30 per cent of all people in need, the highest proportion in the world. People are increasingly affected by mental health issues having lived in fear for far too long, and lacking self-esteem after losing their job. The economic situation of the Donbas region, once the economic heartland of Ukraine, is dire which has seriously impacted household wellbeing and living standards.

Despite enormous challenges, the UN and its humanitarian partners continue to deliver lifesaving assistance to millions of people across the country every month. Over the course of 2018, more than one million people benefited from some form of humanitarian assistance and protection services. Since 2014, over US$400 million has been mobilised through humanitarian response plans.

The humanitarian response is coordinated within six clusters: Shelter and Non-Food Items; Protection; Health and Nutrition; Education; Water, Sanitation and Hygiene; and Food Security and Livelihoods. Cluster partners conduct joint assessments, coordinate the response and monitor humanitarian assistance and programming. Relief and early recovery supplies, including food and non-food items, shelter materials, medicine, psychosocial support and hygienic and education kits are distributed. Access to safe drinking water through in-kind as well as cash assistance is provided. Other urgent humanitarian assistance includes provision of farming inputs, mine clearance and mine-risk education as well as other protection services.

Global Humanitarian Overview: Number of people affected in eastern Ukraine rises in 2019

The conflict in eastern Ukraine continues to take its toll on civilians with an estimated 5.2 million people affected – the highest number since 2014, with 3.5 million of them needing humanitarian assistance and protection. Of them, over 30 per cent are above the age of 60. On 4 December, Under-Secretary-General and Emergency Relief Coordinator Mark Lowcock and the Inter-Agency Standing Committee (IASC) Principals launched the Global Humanitarian Overview

2019 Projections

<https://www.unocha.org/sites/unocha/files/GHO2019.pdf> (GHO) for 2019, together with the World Humanitarian Data and Trends \(WHDT\) 2018 <http://interactive.unocha.org/publication/datatrends2018/> in Geneva.

The GHO features the Multi-Year Humanitarian Response Plan 2019-2020 (MYHRP) for Ukraine. Next year, US$162 million will be urgently needed to deliver vital humanitarian assistance and protection services to 2.3 million people in need in eastern Ukraine. With winter temperatures dropping below -10 Celsius, mobilising these funds now is crucial. The GHO also highlights the achievements of the humanitarian organisations in eastern Ukraine in 2018, including the rapid scaling up of response efforts in hard-to-reach areas through the allocation of US$6 million by the Central Emergency Response Fund (CERF). The MYHRP aims not only to help people with urgent humanitarian assistance, but also to reduce their needs overtime, with collaborative opportunities sought to operationalise the New Way of Working (NWoW) thereby ensuring strong linkages between humanitarian and development actions.

Humanitarians are racing to assist people in frigid winter temperatures, but funding falls short

On 15 November, the United Nations Resident and Humanitarian Coordinator in Ukraine, Ms. Osnat Lubrani, briefed UN Member States on the humanitarian situation in eastern Ukraine and called on international donors to urgently increase their funding to help vulnerable families through the harsh winter. “Thanks to generous support by donors, so far this year more than one million most vulnerable Ukrainians have received vital assistance and protection services. But funding is now falling short,” Ms. Lubrani warned the delegations from 40 countries and international organisations in Geneva. “I call on all Member States to stand in solidarity with the people of eastern Ukraine and help sustain them through the cold winter,” she said. Ms. Lubrani also highlighted the urgency for the affected people to gain better access to basic services as well as for humanitarians to better reach the people in need, the dire conditions at the five checkpoints crossing the “contact line” and the high risk of landmines and unexploded remnants of war (ERW).

With 10 civilians killed or injured in November, making a total of over 3,000 killed and almost 9,000 injured since the start of the conflict, the human cost of the conflict continues to increase. Critical civilian infrastructure is also severely affected. “This year only, we have seen more than 75 incidents affecting critical water infrastructure. If the shelling continues during the winter, people will struggle to keep warm, and frequent water interruptions will increase the risks of communicable disease outbreaks,” Ms. Lubrani said in her statement, referring to fragile interconnected water and heating systems and calling for increased protection of civilians and critical civilian infrastructure.

Situation Report

Last updated: Dec 20, 2018

During her recent mission to eastern Ukraine, the Humanitarian Coordinator (HC) joined hundreds of men, women and children to cross the “contact line” via the rickety footbridge at Stanytsia Luhanska checkpoint – the only crossing point for the entire Luhanska oblast. While crossing, she experienced first-hand the challenges people who make this arduous journey every day face to simply access social services, pensions or hospitals, or to be with their family. Earlier in December, the bridge was damaged by shelling yet again. “I could genuinely experience the hardship of those who are forced to make this challenging journey every day,” she said in her latest statement

<https://reliefweb.int/report/ukraine/united-nations-humanitarian-coordinator-calls-urgent-political-solution-end-suffering> , expressing hope that an urgent agreement can be reached to repair the bridge. She also joined the Minister of Temporarily Occupied Territories and IDPs (MTOT) to observe the improvement works recently undertaken by the Government of Ukraine and talk to people crossing the “contact line”. Advocacy works for the opening of additional checkpoints across the “contact line”, especially in Luhanska oblast have not yielded results so far.

Ms. Osnat Lubrani also observed the humanitarian situation, ongoing response operations, and talked to the people affected on both sides of the “contact line”. She also met with the de-facto entities to discuss the humanitarian situation and the need to scale-up efforts to meet people’s basic needs.

Parliament of Ukraine adopts much-awaited Mine Action Law

The landmark news on the adoption of the Law on 6 December comes at a time when two million people in the Government-controlled areas (GCAs) alone face risk from landmines and unexploded remnants of war (ERW) every day. According to the Geneva International Humanitarian De-mining Centre, Ukraine ranks highest for the third consecutive year when it comes to civilian casualties caused by anti-vehicle mines. The Government of Ukraine and humanitarian organisations continue to mark or clear contaminated lands, to teach people how to mitigate risks, and to assist the victims. However, the lack of a legislative framework on Mine Action according to International Mine Action Standards had seriously hampered scaling up such efforts. Mine-action partners are analysing the Law and its implications to humanitarian demining in eastern Ukraine. The Law’s draft version recommends, among other critical issues, to establish a national mechanism to coordinate mine-action efforts. This is a significant achievement after several years of advocating for a legislative framework for mine-action, but protection of civilians from landmines will require efforts that go beyond the legislation. “Measures must be taken to avoid using landmines near civilian structures,” the HC said in October after a landmine incident killed three children in eastern Ukraine.

Efforts to address protracted internal displacement reach new level

In the absence of notable sustained peace, much of the internal displacement affecting more than 1.5 million people (Ministry of Social Policy) has become protracted. The general economic insecurity of internally displaced persons (IDPs) and average monthly income per IDP household member were considerably lower compared to Ukrainian households (UAH2,187 and UAH4,344,2, respectively), according to the latest IOM survey http://www.iom.org.ua/sites/default/files/nms\_round\_11\_eng\_press.pdf . Displaced persons rely heavily on Government support, such as social payments, the second most mentioned source of income after salary, the survey suggests.

In their efforts to promote IDP inclusion in local communities, on 21 November, the Cabinet of Ministers of Ukraine adopted the ordinance on Approval of the Action Plan <https://mtot.gov.ua/government-adopted-implementation-plan-of-idp-integration-strategy> for the implementation of the National IDP Strategy <https://mtot.gov.ua/government-adopted-implementation-plan-of-idp-integration-strategy> , which had been drafted by MTOT, consulted and supported by the international community. It is hoped that consolidated efforts through the Strategy will protect the rights, freedom and lawful interests of IDPs, eliminate any discrimination, and promote social cohesion. It is now time to shift to practical arrangements, including funding mechanisms to implement the Strategy and the Action Plan where necessary, through support of international organisations and financial institutions.

EMERGENCY RESPONSE

Despite Martial Law, humanitarians continue to reach more people

Despite the implementation of the Martial Law in ten oblasts, including in Donetska and Luhanska, for 30 days starting on 26 November 2018, humanitarians continue to reach people in need with assistance and protection services. Seven convoys with over 1,200 tons of relief items for people on both sides of the “contact line” have been dispatched since November 2018. Overall, the imposition of Martial Law did not result in additional bureaucratic procedures or impediments for humanitarian agencies, as humanitarian response continues through the OCHA facilitated Civil-Military Coordination (CMCoord) notification mechanism. For more information on humanitarian response, visit the inter-agency portal <https://www.humanitarianresponse.info/en/operations/ukraine/infographic/ukraine-humanitarian-dashboard-january-september-2018-en> .

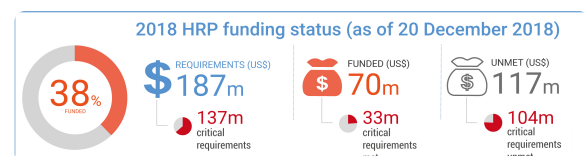

The Russian Federation informed OCHA New York that it dispatched convoys to Donetska and Luhanska oblasts (NGCAs) on 22 November and 20 December respectively, reportedly carrying over 850 tonnes of baby food, medicines, medical and basic emergency supplies.<sup>1</sup>

2018 Humanitarian Response Plan remains underfunded

As of 20 December 2018, the 2018 Humanitarian Response Plan (HRP), which requests US$187 million, is only 38 per cent funded. Whilst this is a slight increase compared to the same period in 2017, a funding gap of over 60 per cent means that humanitarians are not able to reach all who need help.
