Introduction

1. The Working Group on the Universal Periodic Review, established in accordance with Human Rights Council resolution 5/1, held its thirty-fourth session from 4 to 15 November 2019. The review of Kazakhstan was held at the 7th meeting, on 7 November 2019. The delegation of Kazakhstan was headed by the Minister of Justice, Marat Beketayev. At its 14th meeting, held on 12 November 2019, the Working Group adopted the report on Kazakhstan.

2. On 15 January 2019, the Human Rights Council selected the following group of rapporteurs (troika) to facilitate the review of Kazakhstan: Chile, China and Iceland.

3. In accordance with paragraph 15 of the annex to Human Rights Council resolution 5/1 and paragraph 5 of the annex to Council resolution 16/21, the following documents were issued for the review of Kazakhstan:

(a) A national report submitted/written presentation made in accordance with paragraph 15 (a) (A/HRC/WG.6/34/KAZ/1);

(b) A compilation prepared by the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR) in accordance with paragraph 15 (b) (A/HRC/WG.6/34/KAZ/2);

(c) A summary prepared by OHCHR in accordance with paragraph 15 (c) (A/HRC/WG.6/34/KAZ/3).

4. A list of questions prepared in advance by Angola, Belgium, Liechtenstein, Germany, Portugal, on behalf of the Group of Friends on national mechanisms for implementation, reporting and follow-up, Slovenia, Spain, Sweden, the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, Uruguay and the United States of America was transmitted to Kazakhstan through the troika. These questions are available on the website of the universal periodic review.

I. Summary of the proceedings of the review process

A. Presentation by the State under review

5. The delegation of Kazakhstan stated that, in 2017, major constitutional reforms had been adopted, which had strengthened the country's legislative and judicial branches, and had made the Government more accountable to the public. The President of Kazakhstan, Kassym-Jomart Tokayev, had also issued a strategy to build a "Listening State", ready to listen and respond to constructive criticism.

6. Since its second universal periodic review, Kazakhstan had ratified the Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities (in 2015) and the Convention against Discrimination in Education (in 2016).

7. Kazakhstan was committed to zero tolerance for acts of torture and violence, placing particular emphasis on the protection of women and children.

8. The authority of the Commissioner for Human Rights to inspect facilities had been increased. The Commissioner oversaw an Expert Council responsible for investigating alleged human rights violations and monitoring the Government's compliance with existing laws.

9. Since 2010, the prison population had been reduced by 46 per cent and new methods of addressing non-violent criminal offenders had been implemented. Since 2003, Kazakhstan had observed a moratorium on the imposition of the death penalty.

10. President Tokayev had established a National Council of Public Trust with representatives from human rights advocacy groups, the Commissioner for Human Rights, the Commissioner for Children's Rights and other experts. Kazakhstan guaranteed free preschool, primary, and secondary education. Some 93 per cent of children between the ages of 3 and 6 attended preschool and over 7,000 schools – 95 per cent of them State-owned – provided secondary education.

11. More than 700,000 citizens had benefited from the Programme for the Development of Productive Employment and Mass Entrepreneurship for 2017–2021, obtaining professional skills to enter the workforce. In 2018, the Government had expanded the eligibility for targeted social assistance and other benefits, increasing the average basic pension by over 70 per cent.

12. Since 2015, Kazakhstan had adopted numerous fundamental reforms to its justice system aimed at guaranteeing independent and qualified judges, ensuring the rule of law, increasing the accessibility of courts, ensuring the impartiality and fairness of the court system and bringing national courts into line with international standards. Currently, 90 per cent of civil court claims were filed online. All courts were equipped with audio and video recording systems. Emphasis was put on efforts to promote mediation, as a method of pretrial resolution of disputes.

13. In 2018, access to legal services, especially for socially vulnerable groups, had been expanded by a new law. Standards for legal practice and education had been raised and barriers to entering the legal profession had been reduced.

14. In 2016, the Office of the Commissioner for Children’s Rights had been established, legislation guaranteeing children’s rights and punishing child abuse had been improved and juvenile courts had been established.

15. The World Economic Forum had recognized the progress of Kazakhstan in achieving equality for women. The prevention of domestic violence against women and children was a national priority.

16. Kazakhstan had introduced trilingual education, encouraged multilingualism and enabled children to learn in their native languages. State policy emphasized the preservation and strengthening of interconfessional harmony and respect.

17. To combat the illegal export, import and trafficking of persons, an inter-agency commission had been established.

18. With regard to a national mechanism for reporting and follow-up, the Government had taken the measures necessary, including the adoption of comprehensive action plans, improving legislation and creating the institutional framework to implement the recommendations stemming from the universal periodic review and other United Nations human rights mechanisms.

19. The Government had the political will to meet all the challenges it faced and to create opportunities for positive and lasting change for the country and its citizens.

B. Interactive dialogue and responses by the State under review

20. During the interactive dialogue, 93 delegations made statements. Recommendations made during the dialogue are to be found in section II of the present report.

21. Togo noted with satisfaction that Kazakhstan had continued active collaboration with the United Nations human rights mechanisms, had received visits by special procedure mandate holders and had ratified a number of conventions.

22. Tunisia welcomed the cooperation with the special procedures mechanism and the Human Rights Council. It also commended Kazakhstan for its ratification of the Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities and the reform of the Criminal Code.

23. Turkmenistan welcomed the establishment of the National Council of Public Trust, appointment of commissioners for human rights and children’s rights and the ratification of the Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities.

24. The United Arab Emirates commended Kazakhstan for the human rights reforms undertaken to enhance transparency and accountability and the introduction of the Sustainable Development Goals into its national laws and plans.
25. The United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland noted the actions to reduce the prison population and investigate instances of torture. It was concerned about libel charges used to control the media and restrict the freedom of expression of journalists.
26. The United States of America urged the Government to continue its productive engagement with civil society and encouraged further measures to ensure and protect freedom of peaceful assembly and expression.
27. Uruguay noted the cooperation with the international human rights system and encouraged the adoption of measures to guarantee the right to freedom of the press and freedom of expression and association.
28. Uzbekistan welcomed the cooperation with the United Nations human rights mechanisms and noted the Government's commitment to openness, including through the involvement of civil society and the creation of the National Council of Public Trust.
29. Turkey appreciated the progress in empowering women and commended Kazakhstan for the establishment of the National Council of Public Trust. It also noted the President's efforts with regard to human rights.
30. Viet Nam commended Kazakhstan for its implementation of the Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities and the achievements in the areas of gender equality and the empowerment of women and girls.
31. Yemen appreciated the adoption of a national plan to implement five institutional reforms relating to the rule of law, economic growth, accountability and transparency in the Government.
32. Afghanistan commended Kazakhstan for the ratification of the Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities and the establishment of the Commissioner for Children's Rights in 2016.
33. Algeria welcomed the measures taken by Kazakhstan to provide access to housing and to ensure universal access to and improve the quality of education.
34. Argentina praised Kazakhstan for its cooperation with the treaty bodies, and for having issued a standing invitation to, and receiving visits from, the special procedures of the Human Rights Council.
35. Armenia noted with satisfaction the implementation of the national plan on trafficking in persons and the adoption of legislative and practical measures to strengthen punishments for trafficking and crimes against humanity, as well as initiatives to allow national minorities to exercise their rights freely.
36. Australia welcomed a zero-tolerance approach to torture, but remained concerned by the number of reported incidents, indicating that the use of torture remained a systemic issue to be addressed.
37. Austria noted the findings of the Subcommittee on the Prevention of Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment on the reported cases of criminal prosecution against members of the national preventive mechanism and the deteriorating conditions for freedom of expression.
38. Azerbaijan highlighted the development of inclusive education programmes and praised the Government's commitment to achieving the Sustainable Development Goals and its interim progress report in that regard.
39. Bahrain praised the ratification of the Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities and stressed the importance of continuing reforms prioritizing the rights of minorities and vulnerable groups.
40. Belarus noted with satisfaction the improvements in the living standards and welfare of citizens and achievements in the areas of education, health and social assistance.

41. Belgium referred to the recent transition of power and encouraged further progress to increase the protection of human rights in line with the core international human rights treaties.
42. Bhutan highlighted the ratification of human rights treaties, including the Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities, and the revision and adoption of domestic laws as part of the reform of the judicial system.
43. Brazil encouraged measures to prevent registration requirements from hampering the enjoyment of freedom of religion or belief. It praised the commitment to improve the situation of persons with disabilities in the 2050 national development strategy.
44. Brunei Darussalam commended the Government's efforts to promote a healthy environment, in particular the action plan to implement the transition to a green economy, the issuing of microloans and the business support and development programme, Business Road Map 2020.
45. Bulgaria highlighted that the parliament of Kazakhstan had the highest level of women's representation among the parliaments of Central Asia. It encouraged Kazakhstan to provide the Commissioner for Children's Rights with sufficient resources.
46. Canada welcomed initiatives to modernize family courts and the establishment of structures to address torture and curb corruption. It noted the need to address underlying challenges to human rights.
47. Chile acknowledged the ratification of the Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities. It expressed concern that the Criminal Code included the death penalty for 17 crimes.
48. The Philippines commended Kazakhstan for the ratification of the Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities and recognized the policy frameworks and strategic plans on the rights of children, women and persons with disabilities.
49. Croatia noted the overall improvement in the conditions of detention. It also requested clarification on the reported cases of criminal prosecution against members of the national preventive mechanism.
50. Cuba commended Kazakhstan for the review of its legislation, as well as the development of policies, institutions and mechanisms for the protection of the rights of children.
51. Czechia commended Kazakhstan for its recognition of the need for efficient communication with the public and business.
52. The Democratic People's Republic of Korea commended Kazakhstan for its efforts to strengthen the sociopolitical and judicial systems, and measures to form an integrated society, in which all ethnic groups were involved in all areas of life.
53. Denmark was concerned about legal restrictions on the exercise of religion or belief. It encouraged Kazakhstan to continue efforts to promote the rule of law by securing the independence of the judiciary.
54. Responding to comments, the delegation of Kazakhstan noted that, in 2017, a law on the modernization of the procedural foundations of law enforcement had been adopted, taking into account the recommendations from the second review cycle. Detention periods had been reduced from 72 to 48 hours, and decisions on preventive measures and investigative actions could now only be issued by a court.
55. Criminal legislation had been further improved. Agencies were prohibited from conducting investigations into allegations of torture against their own staff. Other efforts included strengthening the role of the independent public monitoring commissions and the national preventive mechanism, installation of video surveillance systems and the introduction of e-filing of complaints.
56. The recommendation from the second cycle to clarify the term "incitement of national, religious and class discord" was under consideration.

57. Legislation was being amended to strengthen punishments for serious crimes against persons, such as kidnapping and illegal imprisonment, and crimes related to drugs and trafficking in persons, and to decriminalize slander.

58. It was noted that abolition of the death penalty would require introducing amendments to the Constitution.

59. Freedom of expression was guaranteed by the Constitution, and everyone had the right to freely receive and disseminate information by any means not prohibited by law. The State guaranteed the protection of the honour, dignity, health, life and property of journalists. The legislation provided for criminal and administrative liability for obstructing the work of the media and journalists.

60. The Prosecutor General's Office had been vested with the power to temporarily restrict access to Internet sites that promoted terrorism, extremism, suicide, the distribution of pornographic materials, or the sale of drugs or weapons.

61. The Criminal Code provided criminal liability for the use of violence in 21 crimes, with sentences up to life imprisonment. In accordance with the 2017 reform, any violent act, regardless of a complaint from the victim, should be reviewed and offenders were held liable. A law was being developed to strengthen penalties for domestic violence.

62. The Government had adopted an action plan to prevent and combat trafficking in persons for 2018–2020. Since 2016, 358 victims of trafficking in persons had been identified and 587 persons had been prosecuted for such crimes.

63. To simplify the process of legalizing migrant workers, 17 migration service centres had been opened, reducing the amount of time needed to obtain a work permit from seven days to two hours.

64. The parliament was considering amendments to ensure that newborn children of stateless persons were documented, which would provide them with access to a full package of social services.

65. Measures to strengthen the judicial system, including capacity-building and institutional modernization, were also highlighted.

66. The Concept of Civil Society Development until 2025 had been developed to strengthen civil society and to ensure its active involvement in decision-making.

67. The Government was developing a new law on peaceful assembly that would, inter alia, simplify the current procedures.

68. Citizens, foreigners and stateless persons could practise any religion without registration, and could also freely create religious associations. The requirements of the legislation on the registration of religious associations were in line with international standards and were applied transparently, as evidenced by the steady growth of religious associations.

69. Djibouti acknowledged progress in the normative and institutional framework, in particular the 2017 constitutional reform, and efforts towards sustainable development through the 2050 national development strategy.

70. The Dominican Republic welcomed steps to strengthen the judicial system through the adoption of legislation to modernize the system and to increase its autonomy.

71. Egypt welcomed legislative and administrative reforms increasing penalties for corruption, trafficking in persons and violence against children, and commended Kazakhstan for the judicial reforms to protect the rights of citizens.

72. Estonia commended Kazakhstan for amendments to legislation related to the operation of children's organizations, but expressed concerns about restrictions on freedom of expression, in particular the Internet law criminalizing online activities.

73. Fiji commended Kazakhstan for the moratorium on the death penalty, and the development of the action plan for the period 2013–2020 and the Presidential Decree of 2014 to facilitate transition to a green economy.

74. Finland noted the Government's efforts to facilitate dialogue with civil society and the establishment of the Commissioner for Children's Rights. However, it was concerned about discrimination against lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender and intersex persons.
75. France welcomed the reform of the penitentiary system and progress in the interaction between authorities and the public. It noted the need to strengthen efforts concerning respect for public liberties and the rule of law.
76. Georgia welcomed the establishment of commissioners for human rights and children's rights, and the ratification of the Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities and the Convention against Discrimination in Education.
77. Germany commended Kazakhstan for efforts to prevent and penalize acts of torture and to strengthen civil rights. However, it expressed concerns about restrictions on freedom of expression and assembly.
78. The Holy See noted the importance of the national human rights indicators related to freedom from torture, participation in the government, education, adequate housing, fair trial and violence against women.
79. Iceland welcomed the national report and the steps outlined therein and expressed its hope for their continued implementation.
80. India welcomed the 2017 constitutional reforms to redistribute powers among the branches of government and making the parliament and the Government more directly responsible to citizens.
81. Indonesia appreciated the efforts to strengthen the independence and efficiency of the justice system and noted efforts to combat trafficking in persons and provide rehabilitation to victims.
82. The Islamic Republic of Iran expressed appreciation for the work done in the field of social security and the creation of equal opportunities for persons with disabilities to participate in society.
83. Iraq welcomed the reforms implemented by Kazakhstan, in particular the legal and judicial reforms aimed at strengthening the capacity and independence of the judiciary.
84. Ireland acknowledged efforts to advance human rights domestically but remained concerned over reports of mass arrests, detentions and criminal prosecutions against peaceful protesters, activists, journalists and lawyers.
85. Israel commended Kazakhstan for its respect for religious freedom and the rights of minorities and appreciated the appointment of commissioners for human rights and for the rights of the child.
86. Italy appreciated efforts made since the previous cycle, particularly the ratification of the Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities.
87. Jordan welcomed the institutional, social and economic reforms leading to the adoption of the National Plan of 2019, and the legislative measures aimed at combating trafficking in persons and crimes against children.
88. Kuwait commended Kazakhstan for measures taken to improve human rights and achieve the Sustainable Development Goals, particularly with regard to protecting the rights of children, including through improved social and health care.
89. Kyrgyzstan praised efforts to cope with terrorism and to protect hundreds of women and children returning from conflict zones and victims of domestic violence.
90. The Lao People's Democratic Republic congratulated Kazakhstan on the measures taken to implement the recommendations adopted during the previous review, particularly the progress in the protection of the rights of women and persons with disabilities.
91. Latvia noted measures taken by the Government for the promotion and protection of human rights and encouraged further efforts towards the fulfilment of its human rights obligations and commitments.

92. Madagascar commended Kazakhstan for, among other things, the ratification of the Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities and the establishment of the Office of the Commissioner for Children's Rights.
93. Malaysia commended Kazakhstan for the broad consultations involving various stakeholders in preparation for its review, the road map for reproductive health and efforts to reach specific segments of the population through health centres.
94. Maldives welcomed the introduction of indicators of the Sustainable Development Goals into national strategic planning, the permanent mechanism to monitor implementation of the Sustainable Development Goals and the commitment to empower women.
95. Mauritania commended Kazakhstan for the adoption of the 2050 national strategy aimed at implementing the national development goals, and of a national plan for the improvement of social and economic rights.

97. Mongolia commended Kazakhstan for the actions to ensure the economic and social rights of its citizens, and particularly the introduction of Sustainable Development Goal indicators into its national strategic planning.
98. Montenegro commended Kazakhstan for the reduction in the number of children in detention but remained concerned about the constitutional amendments of 2017 concerning the application of international treaties. It noted the importance of the complete abolition of death penalty.
99. Morocco noted the family and gender policy, the amendments to the law on social protection of persons with disabilities and progress in protecting children's rights through amendments to relevant legislation.
100. Myanmar commended Kazakhstan for great strides in reform, in particular the progress in protecting women's and girls' rights and achievements in the promotion of gender equality.
101. Nepal welcomed the ratification of the Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities and amendments to election laws to promote pluralism and proportional representation, as well as the commitment to zero tolerance of torture.
102. The Netherlands commended Kazakhstan for the intention to combat corruption but remained concerned about the situation of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender and intersex persons and the lack of progress in ensuring the rights to freedom of expression and assembly.
103. The delegation of Kazakhstan noted that steps had been taken to bring the national human rights institution into line with the principles relating to the status of national institutions for the promotion and protection of human rights (the Paris Principles) by securing the status of the Commissioner for Human Rights in the Constitution. The Commissioner was independent and not accountable to any of the legislative, judicial and executive authorities.
104. Kazakhstan had taken legislative measures to create an effective mechanism for filing complaints in cases of discrimination based on gender, sexual orientation and gender identity.
105. To implement the Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities, the Government had approved a national plan to ensure the rights and improve the quality of life of persons with disabilities until 2025.
106. In May 2018, following a visit by an International Labour Organization (ILO) high-level mission, a road map on the implementation of the recommendations of ILO committees on the application of the Freedom of Association and Protection of the Right to Organise Convention, 1948 (No. 87) had been adopted.

107. In 2017, the Government approved a new Concept for Migration Policy until 2021 in order to protect the rights of migrants and refugees. Kazakhstan had joined the Global Compact for Safe, Orderly and Regular Migration.
108. Kazakhstan had achieved success in educational reforms and, in 2017, it had ranked fourth out of 137 countries in the Global Competitiveness Index for primary education enrolment. Financial support for children from socially vulnerable groups had been ensured.
109. As part of the health-care reforms, Kazakhstan would implement a social health insurance system. An additional package of medical services would be provided for insured citizens, covering at least 94 per cent of the population.
110. In 2019, Kazakhstan had presented its first voluntary national review on its efforts to achieve the Sustainable Development Goals during the high-level political forum on sustainable development, where it had been noted that Kazakhstan ranked fifty-eighth among the 198 countries in the human development index.
111. Nicaragua thanked Kazakhstan for presenting its national report and made recommendations.
112. Niger commended Kazakhstan for the creation of the National Council of Public Trust, the national preventive mechanism and a commission on the rights of the child.
113. Nigeria noted measures to combat trafficking in persons and to ensure protection of victims' rights, and commended Kazakhstan for the reform of the judicial system to enhance the administration of justice.
114. Oman took note of the national report and of the laws, strategies and programmes implemented by Kazakhstan with the aim of promoting and protecting human rights.
115. Pakistan appreciated efforts to prevent violence against women and the establishment of crisis centres and domestic violence helplines. It commended Kazakhstan for the establishment of the National Council of Public Trust.
116. Paraguay appreciated ratification of the Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities and the creation of the national preventive mechanism, and encouraged the strengthening of the institutional framework to implement the recommendations from universal periodic reviews.
117. China acknowledged the economic plan to ensure strategic development and the measures taken to combat terrorism and trafficking in persons, and to protect the rights of women, children and persons with disabilities.
118. Poland welcomed the ratification of the Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities, the establishment of the Commissioner for Children's Rights, and activities to promote interfaith dialogue.
119. Portugal welcomed the establishment of the Commissioner for Human Rights and the Commissioner for Children's Rights and hoped that their mandates and capacity would be strengthened.
120. The Republic of Korea commended Kazakhstan for the ratification of the Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities and welcomed measures to protect children's rights and the zero-tolerance policy with regard to torture.
121. The Republic of Moldova welcomed measures to combat trafficking in persons, the zero-tolerance policy with regard to torture, and progress in women's participation in politics and public life, as well as advancements in universal health coverage.
122. The Russian Federation commended Kazakhstan for its dialogue with civil society and efforts to ensure the social and economic well-being of the population, and welcomed the free and fair elections in 2019 and the concept of a "Listening State".
123. Senegal congratulated Kazakhstan for organizing repatriation operations in 2019, and appreciated efforts to reduce the number of children in detention and improvements in their reintegration and education.

124. Serbia welcomed the implementation of the National Plan with regard to increasing penalties for violence, trafficking in persons and other crimes, in particular crimes against children.

125. Singapore commended Kazakhstan for the establishment of the Office of the Commissioner for Children's Rights, enhanced punishments for the sexual and financial exploitation of children and the development of training schemes for judges.

126. Slovakia commended Kazakhstan for hosting visits from special procedure mandate holders. It was concerned that the Criminal Code recognized 17 crimes for which the death penalty could be imposed.

127. Slovenia noted the progress in achieving gender equality in elected institutions. It also noted that violence against women remained acute, especially in rural areas, and that legislation decriminalizing domestic violence needed to be improved.

128. Spain noted that Kazakhstan had ratified the majority of international human rights treaties and made recommendations.

129. Sri Lanka noted the reforms to the Constitution in 2017 and the adoption of amendments to the laws on elections. It also noted the Government's commitment to zero tolerance for acts of torture and violence, especially against women and children.
