THE HUMAN RIGHTS SITUATION IN AZERBAIJAN AHEAD OF COP29

In November 2024, Azerbaijan will host the 29th Conference of Parties (COP29) of the United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change (UNFCCC) in Baku. To ensure its effectiveness, COP29 needs to provide a forum for a free exchange of views. This includes not only the views of parties to the Convention but also civic actors who are the driving force for climate justice and human rights, both local and international.

The Azerbaijani COP29 Presidency has officially declared that “it is working to ensure everyone’s voices are heard and perspectives are considered and included so that we deliver inclusive outcomes based on shared solutions.”<sup>1</sup> However, for more than a decade Azerbaijani authorities have been increasingly reducing space for civil society, with non-governmental organizations (NGOs) forced to operate in a hostile legal and political environment and arbitrarily closed down, and civil society representatives arrested or forced into exile.<sup>2</sup> Since the announcement of Azerbaijan as the host state of COP29 last year, the authorities intensified further their clampdown on critical voices, resulting in arrests and arbitrary detention of more than a dozen civil society activists and journalists in recent weeks.

This paper presents Amnesty International’s concerns on Azerbaijan’s human rights record and corresponding implications for Azerbaijan as a host country which aims to ensure effective discussions at COP29 and meaningful outcomes. These concerns include violations of the rights to freedom of expression, association and peaceful assembly, reprisals against human rights defenders and journalists, an effective ban on independent human rights monitoring and reporting in the country, widespread violations of the right to a fair trial, and abuse of the criminal justice system for political purposes. The document provides recommendations to the Azerbaijani authorities on steps they can take to address the existing concerns and hold COP29 in an environment that respects and upholds the human rights of everyone in the country.

UNFCCC parties should urge the Azerbaijani authorities to address the deteriorating human rights situation in the country ahead of COP29. As a first step, Amnesty International calls on the authorities to immediately end the clampdown on human rights including the rights to freedom of expression, association and peaceful assembly and the release of human rights defenders, activists, journalists and government critics imprisoned in retaliation for their human rights work and dissenting views.

Key human rights messages:

Azerbaijani authorities and the international community must ensure safe and enabling environment for civil society at COP29, and beyond, for participants of all nationalities and opinions;

Azerbaijani authorities must immediately release all those arrested solely for peacefully exercising their rights to freedom of expression, association and assembly, and repeal laws that restrict these rights;

all states attending COP29 should demand from the Azerbaijani authorities meaningful improvements in their human rights record ahead of the conference. This includes, as a matter of priority, calling on Azerbaijani authorities to end reprisals and immediately release all those imprisoned for their human rights work or criticism of the authorities.

A. CIVIC SPACE: ARBITRARY DETENTION AND POLITICALLY MOTIVATED ARRESTS

The crackdown on civil society ahead of COP29:

The UN climate change conference (COP29) taking place in Baku between 6 and 18 November 2024 will put Azerbaijan in the global spotlight. The conference will take place against the backdrop of growing repression of Azerbaijani civil society, marked by, inter alia, an almost complete suppression of the rights to freedom of expression, association and peaceful assembly. Since Azerbaijan was announced as the host of COP29 last December, the authorities have engaged in an intensified crackdown on civil society, similar to previous crackdowns documented by Amnesty International around other major international events hosted by Azerbaijan, including Eurovision 2012<sup>3</sup> and the European Games 2015.<sup>4</sup>

Independent civil society organizations have been closed down, while individuals have been detained or imprisoned under politically motivated charges or forced into exile. The few that remain and may seek to use their independent, critical voice in the run-up to or during COP29, face the risk of severe reprisals, especially after the end of the conference. Azerbaijani human rights defenders estimate that approximately 300 people remain in detention or prison following grossly unfair trials, on politically motivated charges.<sup>5</sup> This includes human rights defenders, journalists, peaceful protesters, lawyers, and political and other activists, who are held in conditions which do not meet international human rights standards, and who are often denied access to their family members, lawyers, and adequate medical care. In addition, relatives and family members of government critics have also been targeted, either by smear campaigns or by the freezing of their assets through financial sanctions.

Amnesty International therefore warns that, unless Azerbaijani authorities drastically change their approach, independent civil society organizations and individual dissenting voices will not be able to engage freely in COP29. It will seriously undermine the process and taint the outcome of the conference.

Arrests of human rights defenders and government critics:

Some key examples of arbitrary arrests of activists and human rights defenders include the recent case of Anar Mammadli, a prominent human rights defender and climate action advocate, who was arrested on 29 April 2024 and placed in pre-trial detention, facing charges of conspiracy to unlawfully bring money into the country.<sup>6</sup> If convicted, he faces up to eight years in prison. The charges against him are fabricated and his prosecution is apparent retaliation for his criticism of the government and his activism. Anar Mammadli is a founder of the Climate of Justice Initiative, a civil society group which uses the forum of COP29 to highlight human right violations and advocate for the protection of civic space and for environmental justice in Azerbaijan.

Anti-corruption activist and academic Gubad Ibadoghlu,<sup>7</sup> human rights defender Ilhamiz Guliyev, and opposition leader Tofiq Yagublu<sup>8</sup> also remain in custody on fabricated charges. Their arrests and prosecutions are apparent retaliations for their political and civic activities and illustrate the government's escalating crackdown on peaceful dissent and criticism ahead of COP29.

Academics Iqbal Abilov and Bahruz Samadov were arrested on false charges, including of "high treason", in July and August respectively. Their arrests were an apparent retaliation for their academic work and activism. Bahruz Samadov has spoken publicly against the use of military force in Nagorno-Karabakh in 2020, and Iqbal Abilov advocated for the rights of the national minorities in Azerbaijan, including the Talysh. While in custody, they are denied visits or any communication with their families. If convicted, they could face prison sentences of up to 20 years. Their arrests follow the well-documented pattern of misuse of the criminal justice system by the government of Azerbaijan to silence its critics.<sup>9</sup>

Government critics also face reprisals and personal risks outside of Azerbaijan. Most recently, on 29 September 2024, Vidadi Isgandarli, a human rights defender known for his outspoken criticism of Azerbaijan's government and of President Ilham Aliyev, was stabbed at his apartment in France and died of his injuries in hospital two days later. Vidadi Isgandarli sought international protection in France in 2015 after facing persecution in his home country. In March 2021, Mahammad Mirzali, an Azerbaijani blogger and opposition figure, was stabbed 16 times in Nantes, France, but survived. He has since been put under a protection scheme. Vidadi Isgandarli's killing has sent a chilling message to other government critics including those living outside of Azerbaijan just few weeks ahead of COP29.

The Parliamentary Assembly of the Council of Europe (PACE) decided in January 2024 not to ratify the credentials of the Azerbaijani delegation, noting its "very serious concerns as to...[Azerbaijan's] respect for human rights".<sup>10</sup> The PACE noted that its Monitoring Committee's rapporteurs had not been allowed to meet with persons detained on allegedly politically motivated charges, and that the Azerbaijani delegation had failed to cooperate with the Rapporteur for the Committee on Legal Affairs and Human Rights on the theme "threats to life and safety of journalists and human rights defenders in Azerbaijan" and refused his visit to the country three times.<sup>11</sup>

Silencing independent journalists and the media:

Spurious charges have been brought against more than a dozen independent journalists, who remain in prison or in pretrial detention, while independent media outlets such as Abzas Media, Kanal 13, Toplum TV and others have been effectively extinguished after their key members of staff were arrested under politically motivated charges.<sup>12</sup>

Since November 2023, six employees of investigative news outlet Abzas Media have been arrested and remain in pretrial detention on charges of smuggling grant money<sup>13</sup> into Azerbaijan: director Ulvi Hasanli,<sup>14</sup> deputy director Mahammad Kekelov, editor-in-chief Sevinj Vagifgyzy, and staff journalists Elnara Gasimova and Nargiz Absalamova. Two independent journalists, Hafiz Babali and Imran Aliyev, accused of cooperating with the media outlet, have also been arrested and are in pretrial detention. Abzas Media publications had previously covered alleged corrupt deals by companies connected with government officials. The outlet has also conducted investigations into environmental issues such as pollution and health threats deriving from Gedabek gold mine in Gabaday district in western Azerbaijan. Nargiz Absalamova had been detained in Gabaday in June 2023 while covering protests of local residents against the gold mine, had her phone taken away and was subjected to brutal attacks. The outlet was reportedly planning a further investigation of the gold mine pollution and other human rights violations prior to the arrests.

In November- December 2023, a court in Baku remanded Aziz Orujov, director of Kanal 13, and its anchor Shamo Eminov, on charges of smuggling grant money (similar to those in the case of Abzas Media). The court also ordered to block online access to Kanal 13, which had given platform to political opposition and dissenting voices and covered various human rights issues.

Simultaneously, the authorities arrested at least three journalists covering corruption and human rights issues on charges of extortion.<sup>15</sup> These include Teymur Karimov, reporter and director of online news outlet Kanal-11; Arshad Ibrahimov, the head of the news website Dunyaninsesi.az operating in Ganja (a town 300 km from Baku), and Ibrahim Humbatov of Azerinfo.az.

On 6 March 2024, police raided one of the last remaining independent news channels, Toplum TV, its partner organization, the Institute of Democratic Initiatives (IDI), and the Platform for the Third Republic, an opposition group.<sup>16</sup> Authorities then detained about a dozen journalists and activists including Toplum TV founder Alasgar Mammadli, journalist Mushfig Jabbar, Third Republic board members Akif Gurbanov and Ruslan Izzatli and IDI activists Ramil Babayev and Ali Zeynalov.

Torture and ill- treatment and denial of adequate medical care:

Torture and other ill-treatment in detention are widespread in Azerbaijan and are committed with impunity by police and members of other investigating agencies, and those responsible are almost never brought to the justice. There is no independent complaints mechanism, and no access to justice and effective remedies for the victims.<sup>17</sup> Almost all government critics routinely report being subjected to torture and other ill-treatment in detention. As a rule, these allegations are not effectively investigated.

On 3 July 2024, The Council of Europe's Committee for the Prevention of Torture and Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment (CPT), exceptionally, publicly denounced Azerbaijan's "refusal to improve the situation in the light of the Committee's recommendations" and "persistent lack of cooperation of the Azerbaijani authorities with the CPT".<sup>18</sup> In the report published alongside the statement, the Committee expressed extreme concern regarding longstanding and widespread resort to physical ill-treatment (including, on occasion, torture) by the police and called the Azerbaijani authorities "to break this "unholy alliance" between the continued resort to physical ill-treatment/torture by the police and the pervasive practice of threats, planting evidence, forced confessions and extortion."<sup>19</sup>

Detained Abzas Media's director Ulvi Hasanli (see above), reported receiving threats after publishing a letter in July 2024, alleging that "prisoners are crucified, beaten and hung on bars in the corridors" on regular bases in the Kurdakhani detention center N1, where he and other detained Abzas Media's members are held. Government critics are often denied adequate medical care in detention, resulting in the worsening of their health or pre-existing medical conditions.

Human rights defender Anar Mammadli's family report at the time of writing that his health conditions have worsened significantly as he is unable to receive adequate medical treatment in detention. Anar Mammadli reportedly suffers from obstructive bronchitis, causing breathlessness and difficulty in breathing, a condition that is further aggravated by poor prison conditions.

Academic Gubad Ibadoghlu, who had been held in pretrial detention for 274 days despite his deteriorating health, including diabetes and a heart condition, was moved to house arrest on 22 April 2024 after his family members warned that his health was reaching "a critical point".<sup>20</sup> However, he continues to be deprived of liberty, and is not allowed to leave Azerbaijan to receive the medical care he requires.

Alasgar Mammadli of Toplum TV was arrested on 8 March 2024 outside a clinic where he was scheduled to get tested for suspected thyroid cancer. Since then, according to his lawyer and relatives, he has not been provided with adequate diagnostics or treatment. Mammadli's condition continues to deteriorate as he is experiencing pain and swelling of his thyroid gland, and difficulty breathing during sleep. Ruslan Izzetli a civic activist associated with Toplum TV case is also reported being denied adequate medical treatment for his health conditions which include diabetes and gallstones.

The health of journalist Aziz Orujov is also reportedly worsening in prison. His family members report that Aziz suffers from heart conditions, high blood pressure and neurological issues. In March 2024, he was transferred to the prison hospital, however he is not receiving the adequate medical care that he needs. On 14 May 2024 he reportedly suffered from a temporary loss of consciousness.

Reprisals against relatives of critics of the authorities:

Following the arrest of some government critics, the authorities targeted their families and relatives. In the case of Abzas Media, authorities misused the criminal justice system to freeze bank accounts of some of the detained employees and journalists, preventing them from accessing their salaries, pensions, and other financial assets. Ofelya Maharramova, the mother of imprisoned journalist Sevinj Vagifgizi, said she was unable to afford essential medication due to the freezing of her pension and health/disability benefits. The families of Ulvi Hasanli, Abzas Media director, and Aziz Orujov, head of Kanal 13, face severe financial hardship as their bank accounts have been blocked, in apparent retaliation for their relatives' journalistic activities. The tactic of freezing assets, when it does not serve any lawful objective, represents a form of reprisal, aiming to harass and silence not only critics of the government, but also their families and associates, and to intimidate others, who are considering criticizing the authorities.

Restrictive NGO and media laws:

Azerbaijan has adopted restrictive laws excessively regulating the work of media and non-governmental organizations. A new restrictive media law adopted in 2022 requires media outlets to register with the authorities. To qualify for the registration, the outlets have to comply with excessively onerous and restrictive conditions.<sup>21</sup> As a result, media outlets are forced to either cease operations or become vulnerable to prosecution for continuing their journalistic work and receiving grants or other types of financial contributions. In June 2022, the Venice Commission (a Council of Europe body of legal experts that provides legal advice on human rights and democracy) stated that “the Law [on Media] attempts to regulate almost everything related to the media sector in Azerbaijan, including on-line media” and has “a problematic focus on restricting the activities of the media rather than creating the necessary conditions enabling the media to fulfil their ‘public watchdog’ role.”<sup>22</sup>

Similar tactics are employed against NGOs. Restrictive NGO laws were introduced in Azerbaijan starting from 2009 and have been applied since, particularly through arbitrary denial of registration and the application of onerous reporting requirements. In the absence of registration, remaining Azerbaijani NGOs have been forced to find ways around the existing restrictions to secure and disburse funding and continue their legitimate work. By aggressively applying these requirements, in some cases retroactively, as well as by manipulating the reporting procedures, the Azerbaijani authorities have created a pretext for a string of arbitrary arrests and prosecutions of their critics for supposed financial irregularities which, the authorities purported, amounted to embezzlement, tax avoidance or illegal entrepreneurship. On the other hand, government-organized non-governmental organizations (GONGOs) receive financial support from the state and often try to crowd out or replace genuine civil society organizations or grassroots initiatives for pseudo-participation in decision-making. This practice not only violates the right to freedom of association, but also undermines public trust in those NGOs that continue to operate in Azerbaijan and whose voices are muted or overwhelmed by non-genuine groups.

Suppression of the right to peaceful assembly:

Peaceful protests have been effectively banned in Azerbaijan for over a decade. Opposition groups, activists and those critical of the government, including environmental groups and initiatives, have been deprived of a genuine possibility to assemble peacefully and voice their concerns. In June 2023, in the village of Söyüdlü, Gadabay district, police violently broke up a peaceful environmental protest by local activists demonstrating against the planned expansion of a gold mine, detaining the peaceful protestors as well as journalists covering the protests. At least eight protestors from the village have been penalized under administrative proceedings, while three others were arrested on what appear to be fabricated drug-related criminal charges. They include Nazim Baydamirli, an MP who publicly supported the protests.<sup>23</sup> and Joshgun Musayev, arrested on 21 June 2023, a day after he printed posters for the local environmental protests. After spending more than one year in pretrial detention, Joshgun Musayev was sentenced to three years in prison.<sup>24</sup>

At the time of writing, access to Söyüdlü is blocked by police who allow only residents and pro-government media outlets to enter the village.

Azerbaijani authorities also restrict the right of assembly for women's rights groups. Baku city authorities routinely deny women's rights groups permission to gather peacefully and mark International Women's Day (IWD), while the police violently disperse and arbitrarily detain the marchers. In 2021, Amnesty International documented gender-based reprisals, including threats and smear campaigns against the IWD organizers.<sup>25</sup> To date these acts remain without effective investigation while harassment of IWD organizers and feminist activists continue with impunity.

No civic space for effective climate action or debate:

Due to the restrictive environment for civil society and repression against dissenting voices, there is no space for public participation or effective engagement of civil society in environmental debate or decision-making. Indeed, restrictions on human rights including the rights to freedom of association, expression and peaceful assembly in Azerbaijan limit the opportunities for meaningful participation of NGOs, environmental activists, and civil society. Yet these actors are indispensable for any effective climate action.

B. SUGGESTED RECOMMENDATIONS TO THE AZERBAIJANI AUTHORITIES

Amnesty International calls on the Azerbaijani authorities to:

- immediately and unconditionally release all persons arbitrarily detained for the peaceful exercise of their human rights including human rights defenders, environmental, political and other activists and journalists prosecuted under fabricated and or politically-motivated charges in retaliation for their criticism of the authorities, and overturn their conviction or drop all unfounded criminal charges against and all prisoners and detainees who have been detained and prosecuted under unfounded, politically-motivated charges;
- for those pending their release, and for all persons in detention or prison, ensure that they are provided with appropriate health care, food and water, and are protected from torture and other ill-treatment. Allow independent medical examination and access to the medical records of the detainees and prisoners on request, by specialists whom they trust;
- end reprisals against and stop the clampdown on civil society and independent media through arbitrary denial of registration, arbitrary arrests of media workers and civil society representatives and other unlawful restrictions;
- end reprisals against family members of detained journalists and government critics, including arbitrary freezing of their financial assets;
- publicly commit to upholding and ensuring respect for human rights including the rights to freedom of expression, association and peaceful assembly and take immediate steps to enact this commitment in the run up to, during and following COP29;
- ensure safe, effective and meaningful participation of Azerbaijani and non-Azerbaijani civil society actors in COP29 without fear of reprisals. Ensure that COP29 provides a safe and enabling environment for civil society, including any NGOs, human rights defenders, journalists and activists who are critical of the Azerbaijani authorities;
- repeal the restrictive Media and NGO laws, including excessive registration and reporting requirements resulting in effective censorship, and ensure that independent media are able to freely cover and report from COP29;
- effectively implement the decisions of the European Court of Human Rights and other Council of Europe key commitments including by enabling visits by Council of Europe bodies.

RECOMMENDATIONS TO THE INTERNATIONAL COMMUNITY

- Raise human rights concerns with the government of Azerbaijan, at every opportunity, including in the run-up to COP29 and during country leaders' visits/attendance at COP29, in particular demand:
  - immediate release of Anar Mammadli, Gubad Ibadoglu, Tofiq Yagublu, Ulvi Hasanli, Ilhamiz Guliyev, Mahammad Kekelov, Sevinj Vagifgyzy, Elnara Gasimova, Nargiz Absalamova Hafiz Babali, Imran Aliyev; Shamo Eminov, Teymur Karimov, Arshad Ibrahimov, Ibrahim Humbatov, Alasgar Mammadli, Mushfig Jabbar, Akif Gubanov; Ruslan Izzatli, Ramil Babayev Ali Zeynalov, Afiaddin Mammadov, Bakhtiyar Hajiyeve, Avaz Zeynali, Iqbal Abilov; Bahruz Samadov and all prisoners and detainees who have been detained and prosecuted under unfounded, politically-motivated charges;
  - the immediate repeal of restrictive legislation governing freedom of expression, association and peaceful assembly, and the immediate end of all practices that deny or undermine the enjoyment of the respective human rights.

- Express support for civil society and public participation in all statements during and around the COP29 Climate Conference. This includes statements underscoring the role of civil society and recognising the importance of public participation and access to information in effective climate action.
- Take diplomatic, political and other steps to support independent civil society and the right to freedom of peaceful assembly around the COP29 Climate Conference, including by:
  - organising side events at COP29 which involve independent human rights organisations;<sup>26</sup>
  - organising meetings with independent civil society during country leaders' visits/attendance at COP29;
  - requesting prison visits to imprisoned independent civil society and HRDs during country leaders' visits/attendance at COP29;
  - raising awareness about the reprisals against independent critical voices and free media in Azerbaijan, and calling for the release of all those detained and imprisoned under politically motivated charges, at side events and other events;
  - ensuring that the Host Country Agreement (HCA) with the Azerbaijan authorities contains human rights safeguards and that it is made publicly accessible immediately after it is signed.

RECOMMENDATIONS TO THE UNFCCC SECRETARIAT

- Ensure clear human rights principles and protections, including for freedom of expression, association and peaceful assembly are included in host country agreements.
- Combat reprisals and acts of intimidation against Indigenous Peoples or environmental HRDs or climate activists for their engagement with the UNFCCC by:
  - Publicly denouncing all cases of reprisals;
  - Identifying a focal point for reprisals, with a mandate to collect information, to share it with the UN Assistant Secretary-General for Human Rights and facilitate redress.
  - The focal point should make their contact details publicly available and inform all participants in UNFCCC meetings of the procedure to contact them.
- Provide additional information on the process of investigation of complaints into harassment of all kinds or other personal security-related incidents at UNFCCC meetings and make public the findings of any investigations into reported instances of surveillance and harassment of environmental human rights defenders and climate activists at COP29 and all future UNFCCC meetings on at least an annual basis and with due regard to the confidentiality of those affected.
